WET ISSUE TO BE FOUGHT TO LIMIT AFTER ELECTION

Congress Must Decide Whether Or Not Any Modification Will Be Allowed

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Congress will be called upon to register its sentiment on amendment of the Volstead act by legalizing the sale of 2.75 beer and light wines as soon as it reconvenes after the November elections.

The "wet" in the House, it was said, will force the issue before the tenure of the present body expires next March 4. They hope either to succeed following the election or to lay the groundwork for a victory in the next House, which, they contend, will show added "wet" strength.

A bill now pending was introduced by Representative Hill (Rep.) of Maryland, an ardent "wet," which would seek to test the House's position. The measure would legalize the sale of wines and beers having a 2.75 per cent alcoholic content, by taxing their sale under the revenue act. It would place a tax of twenty cents a gallon on all such beverages, including cider.

The measure would first create Federal local option districts, so that any community which is entirely "dry" would NOT be forced to permit their sale. The people of each district could vote whether they wanted beer and light wines, and if the vote were favorable the Volstead act would NOT intervene unless their alcoholic content exceeded the 2.75 per cent limit.

In event the November elections show a decided tendency of voters toward "wet" candidates, the leaders of the movement hope to push through some kind of legislation making the Volstead Act less drastic. It is pointed out that Congressmen who now oppose wet movements would certainly lessen (Continued on Page Three)

DOGS OWNED BY DIXON AND DARR WIN AWARDS FRI.

Albino Coshocton-co was represented by only six contestants, the female dogs belonging to T. D. Darr, of Bedford and Frank Dixon, of Tunnel Hill, won the female series in the Central Ohio Sportsman's Association at Killbuck Friday.

Darr's dog is named Spinner and Dixon's, Clay.

The majority which attended the meeting were from Wayne, Holmes and Knox counties. There were eight counties represented. Fox chases were enjoyed on Thursday and Friday nights.

There was an auction of skunk, fox, rabbit and raccoon dogs. The attendance at the meeting was approximately 300 sportsmen.

ENRAGED BOARDER MURDERS LANDLADY WHO REPULSED HIM

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 21.—Fired at five times, Mrs. Myrtle Reno, proprietress of a rooming house, was killed here today. Police said the shooting was done by Orrville Thornburg, who had lived in the rooming house for 14 years but was locked out today because Mrs. Reno disapproved of his attentions to her. Thornburg escaped.

Chicago Alderman in War On Undertakers Calls 'Em Profiteers

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—There's little use of dying in Chicago to escape old H. C. L. according to Alderman John Czakala.

"The worst profiteers in Chicago are the casket makers," Czakala said in demanding that the city council probe the high cost of dying.

"Poor persons are called upon to pay from $300 to $500 for an ordinary wooden box with a few plush trimmings and nickel-plated handles. Use of a motor car for about two hours costs $19. I am informed the very cheapest kind of casket costs $150."

Alderman Leo Brieske, an undertaker, offered to divulge interesting secrets of the trade after the city council voted an inquiry.

SAFER COMPILES LIST OF THINGS FOR AUTO DRIVER TO WORRY ABOUT

A list of practical rules and suggestions for careful driving have been prepared by Victor Johnson, city safety service director.

Careful consideration of the suggestions and use of them at every available opportunity are advised by him.

Treat your guest in your car as you would in your home.

It is not only discourteous but illegal to risk lives.

Avoid sharp turns either to the right or left.

When moving out from the curb do so in a gradual diagonal line.

When turning to the right at street intersections get as close to right curb as possible before turning; when turning to left at street intersection get into the extreme left lane of traffic.

On wet streets the careful driver is even more careful.

Skidding once started is hard to stop. Turning the wheels in the direction of the skid will help but this is dangerous in as much as usually there are cars or children in the way.

The only skid that you can control absolutely is the one that doesn't start.

You will know a nice steerer by: His keeping to the right of the road.

His extensive and intelligent use of arm signals.

His avoidance of all obstacles however small, without endangering the occupants of his car or any other car.

His ease of handling.

His strict obedience of every traffic regulation.

His courteousness in hugging the right of the road when you blow your request to be let by.

His thoughtfulness of pedestrians—he thinks for them.

His respect for railway crossings—he stops, looks, and shifts gears before he is actually on the tracks.

His realization that, having seen a child, he, not the child is responsible.

TENDERFEET GET SCOUT PROMOTION

The following tenderfeet of the local Boy Scouts have become second class scouts and have received both medals and embroidered badges: Baker, Harrington, English, Karr, Salvage, Parrish, Sherretts, Walker, Dunlap, McGuire, Rogers and Robson.

Forty eight merit badges have been awarded to the following scouts: John F. Timmons, Carl Wendt, Frank Games, Edmund Games, Daniel Morse, Wayne Lawrence, Max Mangold and Leonard Wiggins.

Daniel Morse and Wayne Lawrence each were presented with solid gold miniature first class scout badges.

The awarding of the badges and medals were made by Scout Master Jack Hammill.

Fifty scouts and friends attended their meeting in the common pleas court room Friday night.

NEED NEW SYSTEM Babson Predicts Great Development of Branch Bank Idea

WELLESLEY MILLS, Mass., Oct. 21.—There has been much discussion regarding branch banks at the annual convention of the American Bankers Association which was held last week in New York. Owing to the controversy which this discussing has developed, Roger W. Babson was today interviewed regarding the probable outcome.

"Of course the discussion is the natural outgrowth of the establishment of the Federal Reserve Banks. Before the days of the Federal Reserve system," says Mr. Babson, "a branch bank organization practically existed, although it was an unconscious and invisible organization. For instance, the small bank in Indiana took orders from its correspondent bank in Indianapolis; and the Indianapolis bank took its orders from a still bigger bank in New York. The heads of a few of the New York banks would hold a conference at the home of the late J. Pierpont Morgan or at the home of Mr. Baker of the First National Bank, and decided upon a policy. This policy they would pass along to the large banks of Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, Indianapolis, St. Louis, and San Francisco."

Love-Sick Basso Fails In His Quest

Mrs. Emma Johnson

Miss Louise Baye, coloratura soprano, who in private life is Mrs. Emma Johnson, of Louisville, Ky., has returned home from a year's study abroad, her visit ending abruptly when a love-sick basso pursued her all over Italy threatening to kill her because she would not divorce her husband to marry him.

MUHLEMAN QUILTS AS COMMITTEEMAN FOR REPUBLICANS

After being a staunch supporter of the Republican party for the past twenty-eight years and standing by its policies and platform for the same length of time, Arthur Muhleman, Saturday asked that his resignation as a member of the local Republican committee be accepted in a letter to Chairman George M. Gray of the county Republican committee.

When asked what action he would take concerning Mr. Muhleman's resignation, Mr. Gray announced that he would not give an opinion until he talked it over with the remainder of the committee.

It is likely that the committee and its chairman will act immediately on Mr. Muhleman's resignation.

Muhleman, a prominent labor leader, has come out in support of "Vic" Donahay, Democratic candidate for governor.

Muhleman's letter follows: October 21, 1922.

George M. Gray,
Chairman of Coshocton County Republican Committee,
Coshocton, Ohio.

Dear Sir:
I regret that after being affiliated with the county committee for the past two years, and being a staunch supporter of the Republican party for the last twenty-eight years, that I am unable to support its policies and platform in the present campaign.

Perhaps later when the party again comes to represent more progressive policies, and shows a greater appreciation of the needs of the masses, I will be glad to champion its principles, but at this time I frankly feel out of sympathy with the party's present aims, and in justice to your committee as well as myself, I herewith tender my resignation, and request that the same be accepted at once.

Assuring you and the other members of the committee of my highest respect and esteem, I am, Respectfully and sincerely yours,

ARTHUR MUHLEMAN

By EDNA HUBER CHURCH.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—Can Englishmen make love?

This very serious question has been raised by Horace Annesley Vachell, noted author and playwright.

Vachell is quite positive that Englishmen can't make love, and this despite the fact that he married a Californian.

"Making love in England—regarded from the point of view of technique—may be compared with our culinary art as it is generally malpractised throughout the kingdom," says Vachell. "God sent the food and the devil sends the cooks. Love is, admittedly, the greatest thing in the world."

"What do we make of it?"

"I contend, sorrowfully, that the majority of Englishmen make boarding house hash of it."

There you are—it's almost a direct challenge for American swains.

Divorce statistics in England tend to substantiate the charges made by Vachell.

Certainly there is no lack of loveless swains in England, and they practice their arts most publicly. Every dark street corner is the scene of nightly romance; kisses are exchanged with the utmost frankness. Motion picture theatres resound with snatches and giggles. Perhaps that's what's wrong with English love making—there isn't enough privacy about it.

Vachell, however, is not a critic without remedies. He believes that the English technique in love making is faulty because of lack of early training.

The actual technique should begin in the nursery," says Vachell. "It is a joyous fact that children make love charmingly."

"A boy at school would practice the art of love if he dared. Public opinion inexorably cramps his style."

"Englishmen, for the most part, rush Cupid's furies. They 'go it blind.'"

"English women resent and distrust such methods. I heard a girl say the other day: 'He tried to kiss me before he squeezed my hand.'"

"Love making, surely, should be the art of mutual understanding, the most difficult of all arts, exacting constant practice. In its initial stages it must be tentative, provocative, resilient."

There are many Englishmen who can't agree with Vachell, but American girls will have to decide on the merits of his advice for themselves.

RED CROSS ROLL CALL IS BEGUN IN COUNTY TODAY

The sixth annual roll call of the American Red Cross begins in Coshocton county today with nearly five hundred solicitors at work in all parts of the county. The local chapter, which includes the entire county, has always responded splendidly and a large enrollment is anticipated again this year.

The Red Cross will make no other drive for funds in this county as the expectation is that the annual membership dues will be sufficient to carry on the work of the local chapter.

The work of enrollment will begin today and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

Wolverines Find Aerial Attack Of Buckeyes Easy To Overcome— Seventy Thousand Fans Jam New $1,341,- 000 Stadium—Ohio Team Fails To Get The Breaks—Visiting Team Badly Crippled By Bat- tling Ohioans

OHIO STADIUM, Columbus, O., Oct. 21.—The University of Michigan football team defeated the Ohio State University eleven at the new $1,341,000 Ohio Stadium here this afternoon 19 to nothing. In the initial quarter, Captain Goebel, right end for Michigan, place kicked from the 27 yard line, registering 3 points for the Wolverines.

In the second quarter, Kipke, right half for Michigan, scored six additional points when he made a 20 yard run for a touchdown on a fake line plunge. Goebel kicked goal.

In the third quarter, Michigan scored her second touchdown when Kipke intercepted a forward pass by Workman and ran forty yards. Goebel failed to kick goal.

Kipke drop kicked in the final quarter from the 30 yard line for an additional 3 points.

Ohio State lacked the punch displayed by the aggressive Michigan eleven. The Wolverines outclassed the Buckeyes in every department of the game. The Michigan team suffered the loss of Roby and Vandervoort in the third quarter. Roby sustained a broken leg and Vandervoort, a broken arm. It was officially announced that neither of these star players will be able to participate in any more games this season.

The jinx which has been on hand at the dedication of every stadium in the country, with the exception of Vanderbilt University, which last week tied its game with Michigan, was present at the Ohio Stadium dedication here this afternoon.

Ohio State, reported in the media to an aerial attack which Michigan found more or less easy, following their training at the hands of Coach Little, formerly of Miami University.

Two of the Michigan touchdowns resulted directly from long intercepted passes, both of which were pulled down by Kipke.

Today's game leaves Michigan in a decided crippled condition to carry out the remainder of her Big Ten schedule.

Within the first 45 minutes after the gates to the new $1,341,000 Ohio Stadium were opened at 11:45 today, approximately 20,000 persons had found their way to their seats in the mammoth horseshoe.

At 12:30 all avenues leading to the stadium swarmed with humanity headed for the gates.

The skies are clouding up somewhat and the air is taking on a degree of coolness that render overcoats comfortable.

At 12:40 the Ohio State band, comprising 125 pieces, headed by Tubby Essington, drum major, marched onto the field. They received a rousing ovation.

Playing the "Buckeye Battle Cry" the band formed a square in the center of the west side lines where they again were accorded a big ovation.

At 12:50, the Michigan band, 75 pieces, came onto the field amid a tremendous ovation from the Michigan rooters who occupied an entire block on the west side. As the band passed their section the more than 16,000 Michigan fans rose to their feet and cheered lustily.

The first Ohio State cheer was led by Johnny Crews, veteran Ohio cheer leader. It was the "locomotive yell" and was the first given by the new "cheer-o" section, the newly organized superrooters of Ohio State University.

The stadium was fairly alive with newspaper photographers and motion picture men, who swarmed the gridiron before the appearance of the eleven. The picture men snapped everything in sight.

University of Michigan officials, students, alumni, and rooters took the downtown business district by storm this morning when, arriving, thousands strong, in special train at the union station, they marched down High st., headed by their uniformed university band, to their headquarters—Hotel Deshler. With vociferous supporters of both sides fairly swarming the city, Columbus is "football" mad.

The approximately 100 persons who lined up and spent all of last night outside the ticket window at the southeast tower of the stadium was joined by thousands this forenoon who sought the general admission tickets at 5 were placed on sale at 10 a. m.

Rooters were utilized by the all nighters in keeping warm. Work of (Continued on Page Ten)

Lon Moon wants to trade a second hand car for a reliable horse. General Apathy has put more men in office than all the silver tongued orators put together.

Stable in the Fifties more than 70 have banded together and are trying to express their talents amid the depressing squalor. One is portrait painter whose pictures hang in Fifth Avenue galleries.

Landlords have found they can exact higher rents from the pseudo artists. Of course, the artist is privileged to have his models come and go at all hours of day or night. And no questions are asked. In one of the finest studio buildings on Sixty Seventh street there is only one artist.

The remainder of the studios are occupied by moving picture directors, button makers and young rebellious men. When the musical shows close at night, the street is roaring with automobiles freighted with front row charmers from the chorus.

The landlord of one building was asked by a prospective tenant about "privileges." He smiled and replied: "We require all of our tenants to bring their own mops to mop up the blood and we insist that they shall always hide the bodies."

The studio has blighted cafe patronage. No cafe can permit the latitude of "free life" that exists in the studios. New York police will raid a crap game among dusky elevator runners on the ground floor and ignore drunken hysterical screams above.

In short the term studio is used to stress the fact that loose living is not frowned upon.
 New York book reviewers with out exception praised "Babbit" the new novel by Sinclair Lewis. The carrot-topped young author, however, is finding that literary eminence is not without its hardships. All of his intimates have suddenly ceased calling him "Red." It is like calling H. G. Wells "Red."

I had promised myself that I would not refer in these daily tri-statistics to a recent trip abroad. Today, however, I am breaking the resolution. Much of my time in London was spent prowling about the cab shelters, coffee stalls and mingling with the street characters and street entertainers. The signs of human creatures, thieves, drunkards, prostitutes, each striving for happiness and making it, as most of us do, has always fascinated me. In Soho I talked to a "wait man," a fellow who stands in front of London theatre canopies during intermissions and does his little act for pitched pennies. His monologue was really funny. Last night at a musical revue an American comedian did the same act and used the same lines and got generous applause. He returned from London only recently. I somehow wonder if the outcast "wait man" is receiving royalties.

A fire wagon came rushing and clanging northward on Fifth Avenue. The traffic towers winked their signal warnings for traffic to stop. But an apple checked butcher on a bicycle kept on his way across town. The fire wagon barely grazed the rear wheel and turned the boy quickly around in the other direction without upsetting him and he pedaled in the direction in which he had come. It looked like vaudeville slapstick stuff.

THE BUGGY

My Uncle Hiram has a steed, a critter of a gaudy hue, and he admits his greatest need is something he can hitch it to. He wants a buggy, neat and nice, such as he used in other times, my Uncle Hiram has the price, he is lopsided with his dimes, and yet he roams the town in vain, and brandishes his wad of dough, he cannot find the sort of wain that needs a horse to make it go. The dealers see his bundle big, and weep the tears of bleak remorse, for they can't find a decent rig that might be fastened to a horse. "We'll sell you cars propelled by gas," the dealers cry, in pleading tone, but Uncle Hiram says, "Alas I want to drive my waybacked roan. I long to make a daily trip on wheels, along the village street, I have the horse, I have the whip, I have the harness all complete." "We'll find you piebald unicorns," the dealers cry, in their despair; "and band-cratches, decked with horns, we might provide, with proper care; but buggies, Uncle, are extinct, they fell beneath invention's blows; in modern schoolbooks they are linked with mastodons and things like those. So buy a car from us, old scout, the buggy's gone, from camp and court, we need that roll you pack about, for we have children to support."

To measure the force exerted by persons exercising a Frenchman has invented a machine in which bicycle mechanism drives a dynamo, which registers on delicate electrical instruments.

HAMMOND, Ind., Oct. 21—Mrs. Hazel McNally, acquitted of charge of murdering twin babies, today told the true story of the "great doll hoax."

"You see Mr. McNally was jealous of his divorced wife," she said. "She had remarried, borne two darling little boys and McNally wanted babies to match hers."

"We decided to adopt some babies and palm them off as our own. But McNally wanted to play with the idea so we played it thru to the limit. You may be certain that he wasn't going to miss a chance, of his former wife not knowing that he was soon to become a father again."

Then she told how they bought dolls, to palm them off as babies until they could adopt a boy and girl from a children's home. The heads cost $2 each, she said. Then they got a catalog, so they could use the excelsior in which it was packed to stuff the bodies of the dolls. "We concluded to have twins," she said, "because our story that they were under weight would sound more plausible, for twins are not usually very large."

"About the 8th of December everything was ready," McNally went to work. Later I called and told the superintendent to send Mr. McNally home at once. "Our hoax was all ready. My babies were tiny and I couldn't possibly let anyone see them. The irksome thing about it was I had to stay in bed. As Mrs. Griffiths, the nurse testified on the witness stand, 'She could help herself pretty good.'"

She then told of unsuccessful efforts to locate twins they could adopt, how the dolls became a bother because they lived in a neighborhood where there were "a lot of old married women who insisted on advising me as to the care of my children to make them grow."

"Further McNally held this thing over my head," she said. "Every time I threatened to leave he'd say, 'Now you'd better be careful—I'll fix you if you leave me. Don't forget that you haven't babies but dolls.' Imagination was what the 'doll mother' characterized the noises reported and the blood one witness reported she saw coming from the mouth of one of the babies. Later the McNallys moved to South Bend, Ind., then came the catastrophe. The dolls, packed in a bureau drawer, were broken in transit."

"I left McNally, September 22. I didn't know what he was going to do. I don't care. I only wanted to get away from him and from his dolls."

"So I was arrested for assault when I bashed him over the head with the mop, and later for murder. Now I am free and the joke is still on Mr. McNally."

Now It Costs $995

A Sturdy Six at the Price of a Light Six

At its new low price the Jewett Six is still further removed from the possibility of legitimate comparison or competition.

This Paige-built six-cylinder, 50 horsepower automobile was introduced to the public less than a year ago as a new standard of value. On that basis it made good with a success of amazing proportions, for here at last at the price of a so-called "light" six was a six of genuinely sturdy construction. Every part and unit was found to be more than equal to the demand of any speed, or any condition of the road.

The car that unquestionably established a standard of unprecedented value has now been reduced to $995 f. o. b. factory. There is just one way to understand what this price means. You must examine the Jewett, ride in it, and then compare it with any other five-passenger six.

The complete Paige-Jewett lines of six-cylinder passenger cars offer a selection of thirteen models priced from $995 to $3350. The complete line of Paige trucks meets every haulage need. They are sold and serviced by Paige dealers everywhere.

WET ISSUE

their opposition if home districts show wet strength in November.

Dry leaders, it is said, will oppose every effort to amend the law, holding that one step to make it less drastic will be but the first of a series of attempts intended ultimately to wipe out the law. They predict they have sufficient strength in the present Congress to defeat every "wet" move and will not lose enough votes to weaken their position in the next House.

If the legislation is once passed by the House, neutral observers say, it will not meet with much opposition in the Senate. The Senate, while having a number of noted dry leaders in its ranks, can muster a sufficient wet vote to pass a measure which has already gone through the House, it is said. At any rate, the wet forces are planning to make the attempt and time alone will tell the success of their cause.

The Hill measure, its supporters say, will meet with more support than other wet bills, because it carries a revenue clause. Under its tax provisions it would add approximately $500,000,000 a year to the Federal treasury. With taxation rising and legislators anxious to cut down direct taxes, it is contended they will be willing to accept a bill which would bring in a half billion dollars annually without any complaints from the people so taxed.

ASSASSINATION OF WIRTH PLANNED BY POLITICAL ENEMIES

BERLIN, Oct. 21.—A plot to assassinate Chancellor Joseph Wirth of Germany has been unearthed, it was revealed during heated debate in the Reichstag today. The revelation was made by Paul Loebe, president of the Reichstag, who declared information of fresh plots including one against the life of the chancellor made special precautions necessary. Nationalist Deputy Hergt bitterly attacked Wirth. The atmosphere quickly became charged with hostility and excitement ran high as was the case just prior to the assassination of Dr. Walter Rathenau, late foreign secretary.

Chancellor Wirth, in a speech to the Reichstag, confirmed Loebe's revelation of a conspiracy against his life. He said that one of the plotters had been arrested and confessed. "The situation is terribly serious," declared Chancellor Wirth. "We must fight on new political grounds. But such safeguards as are possible are being taken."

FRIENDS OF FIRST WOMAN SENATOR TO HAVE HER SEATED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—The prospect of Mrs. W. H. Felton, the "grand old lady of Georgia," serving for a single day in the senate as the nation's first "full fledged" woman senator became bright today as a movement was launched here in her behalf.

Friends of Mrs. Felton, who was appointed to temporarily succeed the late Senator Watson, Democrat of Georgia, are developing a plan which they believe will enable her to be seated should President Harding call a special session of congress in November.

Its success will depend primarily on the willingness of Judge Walter F. George, destined to fill Watson's unexpired term, to delay for several weeks after the election in obtaining his commission as the new junior senator from Georgia.

Woman leaders of both political parties are reported favoring the plan which would be based on Mrs. Felton taking the oath of office of a United States senator before a federal court clerk in Georgia prior to the election. This action, it was said, would make her the legal junior senator from Georgia. With Mrs. Felton serving as senator, it is planned to have Judge George delay several weeks in requesting his certificate of election from the Georgia secretary of state. When congress reconvenes in the meantime, it is the plan of her friends to have Mrs. Felton present her credentials to the senate with a request to be seated.

Under the Georgia law Mrs. Felton was appointed senator "until the people shall fill the vacancy." It is the contention of her friends that her service will not legally expire until Judge George obtains his commission from the governor of Georgia, and is sworn in as a member of the senate.

Under these circumstances they contend the vice president will be compelled to permit her attendance in the senate.

Strongly partisan Republicans and anti-suffragette senators are reported ready to oppose all movements to seat Mrs. Felton.

The sustenance of a single objection by the presiding officer would throw the whole matter into committee or force the senate to vote on upholding the ruling.

Her chance of victory would lie in favorable rulings from Vice President Coolidge in which event her opponents could only force a vote on the actual seating. Her friends predict she would be seated if the senate voted on it.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—American prohibition agents "blundered" when they seized the Canadian Schooner Emerald, with a liquor cargo off the New Jersey coast—in act which this government must now express "regret" to the British government, it was disclosed officially at the treasury department today.

For the first time since the dry era began, the state department will be called upon to apologize to a foreign government for over-zealous enforcement of United States liquor laws.

The official investigation, completed today, proved to the satisfaction of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon that when the dry navy chased Hahn ventured eight miles off shore, trained her guns upon the liquor laden Emerald and brot her into the port of New York, American officers committed a serious breach of international comity and agreement. The facts are said to establish that the Emerald, had not established communication with the American shore by means of her own boats or her crew.

The British government's protest, the first of its kind lodged with the state department, challenging the right of this government to seize the British boat, is now held by the treasury department to have been well taken.

The British embassy will receive a response to its protest very promptly, because there now is no question as to the facts. These were made very explicit today in a special report received by the customs service of the treasury from the prohibition officials who directed the operations of the dry cruiser Hahn.

The state department will be called upon to make restitution to the owners of the Canadian schooner. At the department of justice today it was declared that District Attorney Hayward at New York will take immediate steps to restore to the Canadian ship owners the 10,000 cases of whiskey which was aboard the Emerald at the time she was towed into the port, and further steps will be in order to compensate the owners against other losses sustained.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 21.—Three more of the 26 persons indicted by the federal grand jury here in connection with an alleged nationwide plot to dispose of $6,000,000 in bonds stolen in mail robberies, chiefly in New York and Chicago were arrested today, bringing the number of arrests to twelve.

Those arrested today were James Connelly, a former Minneapolis broker, and Margaret Connelly, his wife, and Clarence O. Radcliffe, a bond salesman. The Connollys were freed on $5,000 bond but Radcliffe was held, being unable to furnish his.

Officials would give no reason for the change in plans.

BONAR LAW WILL

HOLD TWO JOBS

IN NEW CABINET

LONDON, Oct. 21.—Andrew Bonar Law has not yet succeeded in obtaining promises from enough Unionists to form a new cabinet. It is now generally accepted as a fact that Bonar Law himself will hold two portfolios, premiership and foreign secretaryship. In such an event the new British foreign policy probably would embrace drastic reduction of British commitments abroad.

The Near East policy would be recast and a big play would be made of the economic situation.

It is that the program will probably be as follows:

Monday—Unionists will elect A. Bonar Law leader.

Monday—Bonar Law will interview King George.

Tuesday—Formal statement will be made that Mr. Bonar Law has accepted premiership and selected cabinet.

Tuesday—Dissolution of parliament will be proclaimed.

According to the latest gossip the new ministerial state will be up as follows:

Viscount Cave—Lord Chancellor

Lord Curzon—Foreign Secretary.

Stanley Baldwin—Chancellor of Exchequer.

Lord Salisbury—Secretary for War.

Lord Derby—Lord of the Admiralty.

Viscount Peel—Secretary for India.

Sir Philip Lloyd—Graeme, President of the Board of Trade.

Nullification In 1922

WHEN, in December 1860, South Carolina saw fit to withdraw from the Union of states and in April of the following spring took upon herself to fire on the flag which floated above the ramparts of Fort Sumpter, it is not related that Ohio was behind the other states in accepting the challenge involved in the issue of States Rights.

The leaders of no state were quicker to see the inherent fallacy lurking behind the doctrine of Secession and no people were readier to respond to the Federal Government's call to arms than the people of Ohio. Hundreds of thousands of men and millions of treasure were voluntarily contributed by Ohio that the Government might stand and the supremacy of law go unchallenged in America.

Now, by a peculiar turn of the wheel of fate, South Carolina is standing without question for the maintenance of the Federal Constitution and unswerving obedience to law, while it is loyal Ohio, or a portion of her people at least, that is proposing to make jest of the Constitution of the United States and to set up the will of a state as superior to that of the nation at large.

Evidently, there is a portion of Ohio's population that has not yet learned, or has forgotten the issue settled with blood in the sixties and how that appeal to force terminated. There are evidently people in Ohio so wedded to a profligate, dishonest, corrupt and outlawed traffic that they are willing to repeat the catastrophe of '61, or failing in so appalling an attempt, to bring the people of this state into nation-wide ridicule and tarnish its fair fame with another abortive effort to prove that a part is greater than the whole.

It is plain the spirit of Prussianism is not yet stamped out in America. The determination of a noisy minority to set at naught the highest law of the land must yet again be defeated. The spirit of the German-American Alliance is not yet dead. It is still set upon putting beer above observance of law and declaring the saloon a more desirable institution than the home.

The petitions which were circulated in behalf of the brewers' proposal to compel the Constitution of the State of Ohio to bid defiance to the Constitution of the United States were carried in practically every instance by former saloon keepers or by men at least indirectly dependent upon the liquor traffic. These men will undoubtedly cast futile ballots next month in support of their treacherous proposal as will every other undesirable element in our population.

If the Eighteenth amendment is obnoxious to any class of people in this or any other state, there is a legal and perfectly unobjectionable way to go about removing it. If the Volstead law meets the disapproval of the same classes there is an equally valid way to secure its repeal. With these methods of altering our basic law no loyal citizen has any fault to find.

But when a proposal so absurd and fanatical is foisted upon the citizenship of Ohio that even a wet secretary of state refuses to entertain it or give it place on the ballot it is time thinking people were measuring the moral and mental calibre of its backers. The thing itself is so inherently vicious, the idea it advances is so disloyal in its every aspect that not even the few remaining wet papers in Ohio dare sponsor it. In fact, dozens of papers that opposed the Eighteenth amendment are outspoken in their condemnation of the spirit which animates this latest attempt at nullification.

The most superficial analysis of this proposed amendment to the state constitution reveals it as the most brazen piece of legislation ever submitted by the liquor interests to any electorate in America. It is so dangerous that its sponsors must by this time realize that they have overstepped the bounds of decency and no longer entertain any hope of its passage.

If it were approved by the voters and the Federal Constitution did not stand in the way, it would permit liquors 2.75 percent alcoholic by weight and approximately 3.50 percent alcoholic by volume to be sold anywhere and everywhere in Ohio. These liquors, equal in alcoholic content to the pre-war beer, could be sold in any home, in any grocery, on property adjoining any church or school. They could be manufactured as well as sold anywhere and everywhere without restraint. As every pint of liquor so manufactured would be presumed to be within the law as to alcoholic content until tested, it would require a chemist in every home in the state and in every other place where liquors were made, to ascertain whether the products of these countless stills came within the requirements of the law.

This amendment would inaugurate an era of unbridled license so far beyond anything even contemplated by the liquor people themselves in the old days that the mere contemplation of its potential lawlessness must result in its overwhelming defeat on November 7. Never did the old saying that whom the gods wish to destroy they first made mad, find better illustration than is exhibited in this piece of useless saloon effrontery upon which the voters of Ohio must soon pass.

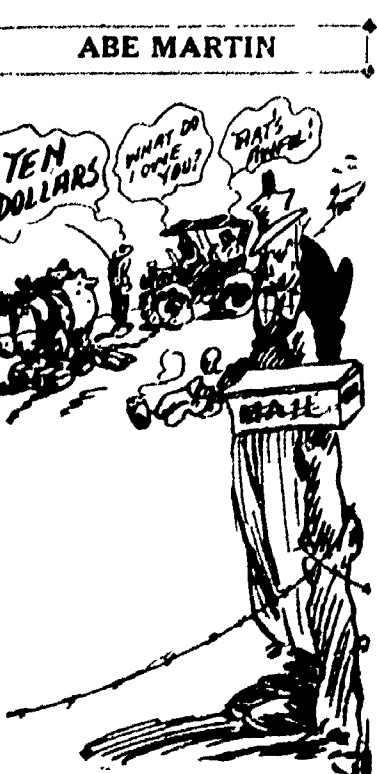

It is unfortunate that the liquor forces of the nation should single out Ohio for their worthless straw vote. Ever since the supreme court decision that this amendment must go on the ballot, the state has been the laughing stock of the nation. But in the end the choice will be unfortunate for the deluded interests backing this amendment. As Ohio rejected nullification in '61, so will she repudiate it in 1922. As secession was answered sixty years ago, so will it be answered today.

This state made a decision five years ago that it will not lightly reverse. For three generations our fathers tried to reform the liquor business in Ohio and failed. For three generations that business proved itself to be destructive of every righteous force in Ohio politics. In self-defense our people banished the traffic in intoxicants entirely and it is not likely that they have so soon decided to reverse a deliberate judgment.

If the saloon is again to be inflicted on this nation it will not be by the visionary illegal plan the brewers propose here in Ohio.

New York Day-by-Day

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—The New York studio is a cloak for vice. So says the Artists' League. It states that 70 per cent are used for questionable purposes. Many are one-name and phone numbers. It day-week retreats for Wall Street frothing a cocktail shaker is art, high flyers and cloak and suit the studio tenants are adept merchants. "Stowid" is the jesting name but it fits. The average studio tenant thinks artist has no place to work. In a Stable in the Fifties more than 50 have banded together and are trying to express their talents amid the depressing squalor. One is portrait painter whose pictures hang in Fifth Avenue galleries.

Landlords have found they can exact higher rents from the pseudo artists. Of course, the artist is privileged to have his models come and go at all hours of day or night. And no questions are asked. In one of the finest studio buildings on Sixty Seventh street there is only one artist.

The remainder of the studios are occupied by moving picture directors, button makers and young remittance men. When the musical shows close at night, the street is roaring with automobiles freighted with front row charmers from the chorus.

The landlord of one building was asked by a prospective tenant about "privileges." He smiled and replied: "We require all of our tenants to bring their own mops to mop up the blood and we insist that they shall always hide the bodies."

The studio has blighted cafe patronage. No cafe can permit the latitude of "tree life" that exists in the studios. New York police will raid a crap game among dusky elevator runners on the ground floor and ignore drunken hysterical screams above.

In short the term studio is used to stress the fact that loose living is not frowned upon.

New York book reviewers without exception praised "Babbit" the new novel by Sinclair Lewis. The carrot-topped young author, however, is finding that literary eminence is not without its hardships. All of his intimates have suddenly ceased calling him "Red." It is like calling H. G. Wells "Brrb."

I had promised myself that I would not refer in these daily trivialities to a recent trip abroad. Today, however, I am breaking the resolution. Much of my time in London was spent prowling about the cab shelters, coffee stalls and mingling with the street characters and street entertainers. The signs of human creatures, thieves, drunkards, prostitutes, each striving for happiness and missing it, as most of us do, has always fascinated me. In Soho I talked to a "wait man," a fellow who stands in front of London theatre canopies during intermissions and does his little act for pitched pennies. His monologue was really funny. Last night at a musical revue an American comedian did the same act and used the same lines and got generous applause. He returned from London only recently. I somehow wonder if the outcast "wait man" is receiving royalties.

A fire wagon came rushing and clanging northward on Fifth Avenue. The traffic towers winked their signal warnings for traffic to stop. But an apple checked butcher on a bicycle kept on his way across town. The fire wagon barely grazed the rear wheel and turned the boy quickly around in the other direction without upsetting him and he pedaled in the direction in which he had come. It looked like vaudeville slapstick stuff.

 THE BUGGY

My Uncle Hiram has a steed, a critter of a gaudy hue, and he admits his greatest need is something he can hitch it to. He wants a buggy, neat and nice, such as he used in other times; my Uncle Hiram has the price, he is lopsided with his dimes, and yet he roams the town in vain, and brandishes his wand of dough; he cannot find the sort of wain that needs a horse to make it go. The dealers see his bundle big, and weep the tears of bleak remorse, for they can't find a decent rig that might be fastened to a horse. "We'll sell you cars propelled by gas," the dealers cry, in pleading tone, but Uncle Hiram says, "Alas I want to drive my swaybacked roan. I long to make a daily trip on wheels, along the village street; I have the horse, I have the whip, I have the harness all complete." "We'll find you piebald unicorns," the dealers cry, in their despair; "and bandersnatches, decked with horns, we might provide, with proper care; but buggies, Uncle, are extinct; they fell beneath invention's blows; in modern schoolbooks they are linked with mastodons and things like those. So buy a car from us, old scout, the buggy's gone, from camp and court; we need that roll you pack about, for we have children to support."

AUTO DRIVER OFFERS HIS SMALL DAUGHTER TO BEREAVED MOTHER

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Oct. 21—Charles Buckley, driver of an automobile that killed four-year-old Marion Newton, today offered to give up his own five-year-old daughter, Isabelle, to the parents of the dead child, if it would in any measure console them for their loss.

"Would to God I had been killed instead of the innocent child," he declared.

"I love my little girl dearly. I would willingly give her up if it would ease the anguish of the mother who lost her little girl."

"I have driven an automobile 14 years without an accident before but never again will I touch the wheel of a machine."

30 DRUG PEDDLERS TAKEN IN PA. RAID

HARRISBURG, Penna., Oct. 21—Thirty peddlers and sellers of narcotic drugs were arrested here today in raids made by federal, state and county authorities. Ida Bradshaw, believed to be the head of the drug traffic in this district was among those arrested. Five squads of city police aided by U. S. agents made the round-up, raiding nine selling centers, which it has been alleged were revealed by Elsie Whitaker, sentenced yesterday in Philadelphia for a long prison term for drug peddling.

HUBBY'S JEALOUSY CAUSED DOLL HOAX, WOMAN ACQUITTED

(Copyright, 1922, by International News Service)

HAMMOND, Ind., Oct. 21—Mrs. Hazel McNally, acquitted of the charge of murdering twin babies, today told the true story of the "great doll hoax."

"You see Mr. McNally was jealous of his divorced wife," she said. "She had remarried, borne two darling little boys and McNally wanted babies to match hers."

"We decided to adopt some babies and palm them off as our own. But McNally wanted to play with the idea so we played it thru to the limit. You may be certain that he wasn't going to miss a chance of his former wife not knowing that he was soon to become a father again."

Then she told how they bought dolls, to palm them off as babies until they could adopt a boy and girl from a children's home. The heads cost $2 each, she said. Then they had a cullish bowl, so they could use the excelsior in which it was packed to stuff the bodies of the dolls. "We concluded to have twins," she said, "because our story that they were under weight would sound more plausible, for twins are not usually very large."

"About the 8th of December everything was ready. McNally went to work. Later I called and told the superintendent to send Mr. McNally home at once. "Our hoax was all ready. My babies were tiny and I couldn't possibly let anyone see them. The irksome thing about it was I had to stay in bed. As Mrs. Griffiths, the nurse testified on the witness stand, "She could help herself pretty good."

She then told of unsuccessful efforts to locate twins they could adopt, how the dolls became a bother because they lived in a neighborhood where there were "a lot of old married women who insisted on advising me as to the care of my children to make them grow."

"Further McNally held this thing over my head," she said. "Every time I threatened to leave he'd say, 'Now you'd better be careful—I'll fix you if you leave me. Don't forget that you haven't babies but dolls.' Imagination was what the "doll mother" characterized the noises reported and the blood one witness reported she saw coming from the mouth of one of the babies. Later the McNallys moved to South Bend, Ind., then came the catastrophe. The dolls, packed in a bureau drawer, were broken in transit."

"I left McNally, September 22. I didn't know what he was going to do. I don't care. I only wanted to get away from him and from his dolls."

"So I was arrested for assault when I bashed him over the head with the mop, and later for murder. Now I am free and the joke is still on Mr. McNally."

DENIES KILLING ON THE GALLOWS

AZTEC, N. M., Oct. 21—Stoutly maintaining his innocence of the crime, Stephen Katonka, was hanged today on a crude gallows on the bank of the Animas river, half a mile from the jail here, for the murder of Sam Groy and William Kelly, two Gallup, N. M., taxi-cab drivers.

Just before the trap was sprung Katonka repeated his denials of having killed the men and placed the blame upon his common-law wife, Alice Katonka, who is serving a prison term on a conviction of second degree murder in connection with the slaying.

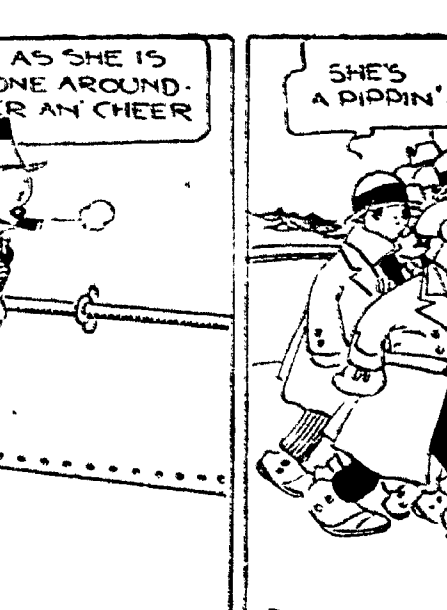

HARD BLOW TO BOTTLEGGERS

COLUMBUS, Oct. 21—Announcement that chemists of the federal prohibition department, at Washington, D. C. have developed a process precluding possibility of re-distilling denatured and wool alcohol was made here today, following a conference between federal prohibition Commissioner Haynes, Washington, D. C., and Judge E. L. Porterfield, newly appointed federal chief of the Ohio-Michigan-Indiana division of general prohibition agents and a number of other federal dry officials working in Ohio.

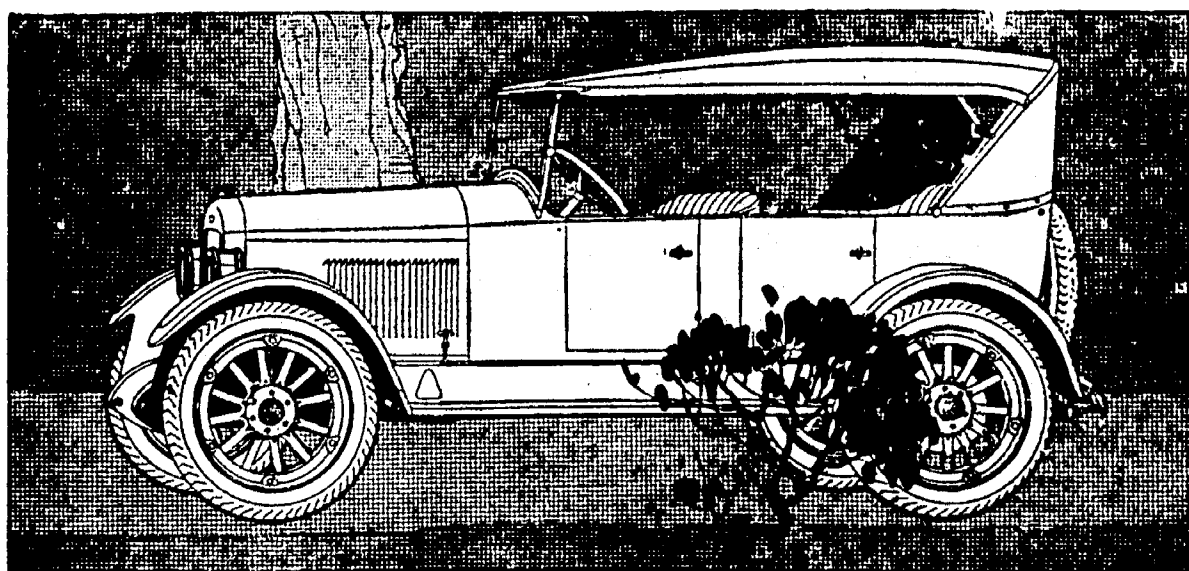

Thread spun in Sweden from 60 per cent pete fibre and 40 per cent wool is said to be almost indistinguishable from pure wool and about 50 per cent stronger.

A Sturdy Six at the Price of a Light Six

At its new low price the Jewett Six is still further removed from the possibility of legitimate comparison or competition.

This Paige-built six-cylinder, 50 horsepower automobile was introduced to the public less than a year ago as a new standard of value. On that basis it made good with a success of amazing proportions, for here at last at the price of a so-called "light" six was a six of genuinely sturdy construction. Every part and unit was found to be more than equal to the demand of any speed, or any condition of the road.

The car that unquestionably established a standard of unprecedented value has now been reduced to $995 f. o. b. factory. There is just one way to understand what this price means. You must examine the Jewett, ride in it, and then compare it with any other five-passenger six.

The complete Paige-Jewett lines of six-cylinder passenger cars offer a selection of thirteen models priced from $995 to $3350. The complete line of Paige trucks meets every haulage need. They are sold and serviced by Paige dealers everywhere.

WET ISSUE

show wet strength in November. Dry leaders, it is said, will oppose every effort to amend the law, holding that one step to make it less drastic will be but the first of a series of attempts intended ultimately to wipe out the law. They predict they have sufficient strength in the present Congress to defeat every "wet" move and will not lose enough votes to weaken their position in the next House. If the legislation is once passed by the House, neutral observers say, it will not meet with much opposition in the Senate. The Senate, while having a number of noted dry leaders in its ranks, can muster a sufficient wet vote to pass a measure which has already gone through the House, it is said. At any rate, the wet forces are planning to make the attempt and time alone will tell the success of their cause.

The Hill measure, its supporters say, will meet with more support than other wet bills, because it carries a revenue clause. Under its tax provisions it would add approximately $500,000,000 a year to the Federal treasury. With taxation rising and legislators anxious to cut down direct taxes, it is contended they will be willing to accept a bill which would bring in a half billion dollars annually without any complaints from the people so taxed.

ASSASSINATION OF WIRTH PLANNED BY POLITICAL ENEMIES

BERLIN, Oct. 21.—A plot to assassinate Chancellor Joseph Wirth of Germany has been unearthed, it was revealed during heated debate in the Reichstag today. The revelation was made by Paul Loebe, president of the Reichstag, who declared information of fresh plots including one against the life of the chancellor made special precautions necessary. Nationalist Deputy Hergt bitterly attacked Wirth. The atmosphere quickly became charged with hostility and excitement ran high as was the case just prior to the assassination of Dr. Walter Rathenau, late foreign secretary. Chancellor Wirth, in a speech to the Reichstag, confirmed Loebe's revelation of a conspiracy against his life. He said that one of the plotters had been arrested and confessed. "The situation is terribly serious," declared Chancellor Wirth. "We must fight on new political murders. But such safeguards as are possible are being taken."

FRIENDS OF FIRST WOMAN SENATOR TO HAVE HER SEATED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—The prospect of Mrs. W. H. Felton, the "grand old lady of Georgia" serving for a single day in the senate as the nation's first "full fledged" woman senator became bright today as a movement was launched here in her behalf.

Friends of Mrs. Felton, who was appointed to temporarily succeed the late Senator Watson, Democrat of Georgia, are developing a plan which they believe will enable her to be seated should President Harding call a special session of congress in November.

Its success will depend primarily on the willingness of Judge Walter F. George, destined to fill Watson's unexpired term, to delay for several weeks after the election in obtaining his commission as the new junior senator from Georgia.

Woman leaders of both political parties are reported favoring the plan which would be based on Mrs. Felton taking the oath of office of a United States senator before a federal court clerk in Georgia prior to the election. This action, it was said, would make her the legal junior senator from Georgia. With Mrs. Felton serving as senator, it is planned to have Judge George delay several weeks in requesting his certificate of election from the Georgia secretary of state. When congress reconvenes in the meantime, it is the plan of her friends to have Mrs. Felton present her credentials to the senate with a request to be seated.

Under the Georgia law Mrs. Felton was appointed senator "until the people shall fill the vacancy." It is the contention of her friends that her service will not legally expire until Judge George obtains his commission from the governor of Georgia, and is sworn in as a member of the senate.

Under these circumstances they contend the vice president will be compelled to permit her attendance in the senate.

Strongly partisan Republicans and anti-suffragette senators are reported ready to oppose all movements to seat Mrs. Felton.

The sustenance of a single objection by the presiding officer would throw the whole matter into committee or force the senate to vote on upholding the ruling.

Her chance of victory would lie in favorable rulings from Vice President Coolidge in which event her opponents could only force a vote on the actual seating. Her friends predict she would be seated if the senate voted on it.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 21.—Three more of the 26 persons indicted by the federal grand jury here in connection with an alleged nationwide plot to dispose of $6,000,000 in bonds stolen in mail robberies, chiefly in New York and Chicago were arrested today, bringing the number of arrests to twelve.

Those arrested today were James Connelly, a former Minneapolis broker, and Margaret Connelly, his wife, and Clarence O. Radcliffe, a bond salesman. The Connollys were freed on $5,000 bond but Radcliffe was held, being unable to furnish his.

SEIZURE OF A BRITISH VESSEL IS HUMILIATING

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—American prohibition agents "blundered" when they seized the Canadian Schooner Emerald, with a liquor cargo off the New Jersey coast—an act which this government must now express "regret" to the British government. It was disclosed officially at the treasury department today.

For the first time since the dry era began, the state department will be called upon to apologize to a foreign government for overzealous enforcement of United States liquor laws.

The official investigation, completed today, proved to the satisfaction of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon that when the dry navy chased Hahn ventured eight miles off shore, trained her guns upon the liquor laden Emerald and brot her into the port of New York. American officers committed a serious breach of international comity and agreement. The facts are said to establish that the Emerald, had not established communication with the American shore by means of her own boats or her crew.

The British government's protest, the first of its kind lodged with the state department, challenging the right of this government to seize the British boat, is now held by the treasury department to have been well taken.

The British embassy will receive a response to its protest very promptly, because there now is no question as to the facts. These were made very explicit today in a special report received by the customs service of the treasury from the prohibition officials who directed the operations of the dry cruiser Hahn.

BONAR LAW WILL HOLD TWO JOBS IN NEW CABINET

LONDON, Oct. 21.—Andrew Bonar Law has not yet succeeded in obtaining promises from enough Unionists to form a new cabinet. It is now generally accepted as a fact that Bonar Law himself will hold two portfolios, premiership and foreign secretaryship. In such an event the new British foreign policy probably would embrace drastic reduction of British commitments abroad.

The Near East policy would be recast and a big play would be made of the economic situation.

It is that the program will probably be as follows:

Monday—Unionists will elect A. Bonar Law leader.

Monday—Bonar Law will interview King George.

Tuesday—Formal statement will be made that Mr. Bonar Law has accepted premiership and selected cabinet.

Tuesday—Dissolution of parliament will be proclaimed.

According to the latest gossip the new ministerial slate will be up as follows:

Viscount Cave—Lord Chancellor.

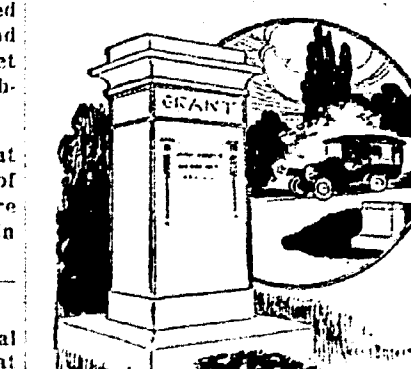

Lord Curzon—Foreign Secretary.
Stanley Baldwin—Chancellor of Exchequer.
Lord Salisbury—Secretary for War.
Lord Derby—Lord of the Admiralty.
Viscount Peel—Secretary for India.
Sir Phillip Lloyd—Graeme—President of the Board of Trade.
Colonel Gretton—Home Secretary.

Colonel Leopold Amery—Colonial Secretary.
Arthur Boswell Griffith—Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries.
Sir William Joynson Hicks—Air Minister.

Chamberlain's Warning

To envisage this remarkable situation: one should pay little attention to the words of Lloyd George or the propaganda of his followers. The key is found in the remarkable speech made by Austen Chamberlain, leader of the Unionist party, who, in an attempt to keep his followers in line, had to utter this warning:

"There have been moments when revolution was very near to our door. Within the last few weeks threats of direct action have been raised again."

"When an election does come the new house of commons will be very different from the present house of commons."

JAILED IN JERSEY MURDER MYSTERY

Nicholas Bahner

As a result of the investigation into the mysterious murders of Rev. E. W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills, his choir leader, Nicholas Bahner, former saloon keeper, of New Brunswick, N. J., has been placed behind bars on serious charges made by his daughter, Pearl, who found the bodies. Bahner is being questioned as to his whereabouts on the night of the murder.

leave Lloyd George to play with the nation and empire as he has played with them for the last four years, might prove fatal. Clever he may be as a politician, but as a statesman he has proved a bungler. He has been trickster enough to get out of one difficult situation after another, but each time he has left his people a little worse off.

Here are some of the things that are in the minds of the Tories as they set out to overrun him:

(1.) The present huge majority in the house of commons was elected on a platform promising it would make Germany pay to the uttermost and would solidify the Entente which won the war. Yet in the peace conference he turned away from France and undertook to rebuild Germany. He carried his campaign so far that France was driven into an Entente with the Vatican, into the construction of a counter balance of power in Central Europe, and into a combination with Latin and other nations to control the League of Nations. The result has been a union of Catholic peoples against the British empire and one defeat after another for British diplomacy, notably in the French entrance into the Ruhr region and the grant of most of the coal mines of Upper Silesia to Poland.

(2.) Playing in with the oil interests of Britain he undertook to take control of the Dardanelles and Bosphorus and to clinch the hold of his nation on Palestine and Mesopotamia. Despite many warnings he encouraged the Greeks to make their fatal campaign against the Turks. The result was to set the whole Mohammedan world by the ears. These adventures have cost the British taxpayer hundreds of millions of dollars with no return in sight.

(3.) Played With the Bolsheviks

Against the wishes of France and the opposition of the Conservatives at home he has consistently tried to make arrangements with the Bolsheviks. In each case they have played with him until they achieved some object, then turned a cold shoulder to him and resumed their efforts to break up the British empire.

(4.) Despite pledges made to the British dominions during the war, as the price of their assistance, he has endeavored by trickery to force them back into their position of dependence instead of independence. His call to them to help against the Turks was an endeavor to make them acknowledge the supremacy of the London government. He drove them to a declaration of their right to act as they pleased; and so made a wide rift in the empire.

(5.) He earned the distrust of the Washington government by his hold attempt to break up the Washington arms conference in order to compel America to take part in the Genoa conference. This attempt was foiled, as I pointed out at the time, by the blunt notice to Mr. Balfour by Mr. Hughes that the American government would not concern itself with European affairs until Pacific affairs were settled.

(6.) At home he has run with the labor hares and hunted with the capitalist hounds. He has granted huge unemployment doles to labor which are breaking the back of the taxpayer. At the same time he has helped the employing class to defeat the miners and other organizations and has forced a measure of protection on free trade England. Meanwhile, he has spent vast sums in his ambitious projects and refused to make drastic cuts in the extravagances of the government machine left by the war.

Reputation for "Cleverness"

Meanwhile he has assiduously built up his reputation for "cleverness." His propaganda organs have kept the world informed he was too smart for his enemies and that was why he kept in power. He would get into serious trouble and dare his parliamentary majority to put him out; and when they would not do so—for fear of a Labor government—he was loudly acclaimed as the one statesman who would ride any storm.

But in the Turkish crisis he carried his trickery too far. He traded on two supposed factors; that British prestige was high in the east and the Turks dare not face this power; and that the love of the mother countries was so strong in the dominions that their governments could not stand out against a call for help. He also undertook to bluff the French and Italians by a bold policy which would force them to take sides with Britain lest they should lose a share in the control of the Turkish straits.

In all these things his reckoning was wrong. The Dominion refused to heed the call; the French and Italians were thus encouraged to stand out against him; and the Turks, seeing England isolated, simply overrode her. Every British ultimatum was rudely defied by Kemal until he got what he wanted without fighting; then he gracefully obeyed the final ultimatum, which left him in position to take possession of the Straits whenever he chose. It was the greatest diplomatic humiliation Britain had experienced within a century or more.

J. L. Garvin, one of the ablest of London editors and formerly one of Lloyd George's most ardent supporters, confesses, "There is not one spot on the world's map where we can call our foreign policy successful."

Fear Worse Is to Come

That is what aroused the Tories to the wild hunt for the premier's scalp. Their nation got out of this scrape without going to war; but from the way the situation was handled they were fearful of what the next crisis might bring to their country and empire. For they are perfectly aware that other crises will arise; and before long.

Russia is gathering her armies on the western frontier. Roumania's monarchs, having themselves crowned in Transylvania, had to close the frontiers tightly lest enemies should send plotters to break up the affair. Bulgaria, again brot into touch with the Turk, raises anew her claim for an outlet to the Aegean Sea. Jugoslavia asks why she should not have Salonika at the expense of beaten Greece. The Fascists, who are the strongest power of the day in Italy, proclaim that their chief aim is to break the power of the British empire in the Mediterranean. Austria gets deeper and deeper into bankruptcy. The German mark goes to fresh depths and unrest increases. The Bavarian party at length comes out boldly for a separate monarchy at Munich.

All over Europe high explosives lie around. Kemal unexpectedly set off a great blast. Who may be tempted to set off another just as suddenly and with equally devastating effect? And if the British government is in the hands of an irresponsible juggler what may happen to British interests in another field.

Triple Alliance a Fact

The situation is made no better by the proof at least that Germany, Russia and Turkey have really entered into a Triple Alliance calling for united military action. It is highly doubtful whether Turkey will stick. Now that she has obtained about all she could get even with the help of Russia she will be inclined to heed the voice of France and play against the Bolsheviks. She will want to be in position to take some of the oil riches of the Caucasus and she will not want to see the Russians advancing thru the Balkans.

But the alliance between Germany and Russia is one that is natural and likely to have a great influence on the events of the near future. Germans are authentically reported to have speeded up the output of munitions for Trotsky's army of 1,800,000. It would be to the interest of Germany to have this force upset the balance in eastern Europe and so pave the way for further action.

In such a time the Conservatives of Britain think a real statesman is required at the head of their government if they are to avoid further defeats or to gain advantages they need to reconquer their fortunes. They are inclined to feel that even a Labor government would be sobered by responsibility and would not betray the country. But they are not convinced that a Labor government could be elected if a fight were made on principles which would appeal to the sound sense of the nation. They are seeking to throw off Lloyd George so they can make such a fight.

There is, however, a very strong probability that the Labor party will carry the country in an election.

tion. It has steadily grown and in all recent tests has indicated enough strength to elect a majority of the commons. If they do succeed the world will indeed face a great problem. A Labor cabinet might flop over to a complete alliance with the Germans and Russians. It might make vast changes in the British constitution which would break the empire into pieces. It would certainly pass legislation which would have a vital effect on British trade and therefore on the trade of the world. In fact, there is a strong prospect of world politics being badly upset before this British crisis comes to its conclusion.

VICTIM OF SHELL SHOCK THREATENS TO KILL FATHER

CINCINNATI, Oct. 21. — Bitterly resentful of being sent to a sanitarium three weeks ago, Prior Earl Hutchinson, 25, ex-marine, was taken prisoner in his bedroom early this morning after he had threatened to kill his father unless he could prove that he had no part in sending him to the institution and successfully blockaded himself in his home since six o'clock yesterday evening.

The crazed veteran got a "pump" shot-gun and a hunting knife immediately after his father brot him home from the sanitarium and threatened to kill anybody who approached him except his mother who remained in the house with him and quietly informed the police when her son fell asleep. Young Hutchinson yawned and sat up in bed when the police burst in.

"Hello, folks," he said, "what's the brief sleep had cleared his mind for he acted in as rational a manner as ever. He was taken to police headquarters where he is held for safe keeping. Hutchinson lost his hearing as the result of being shell shocked in France and had been doing light work until his nerves got in such condition three weeks ago, that he was sent to a hospital on a doctor's advice."

MOVIE STAR HAS EYE AFFLICTION

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Oct. 21.—Wallace Reid, motion picture star, is under the care of a specialist today, suffering from "klieg-eye," according to information from the studio where Reid is employed. "Klieg-eye" is said to be a burning of the eyeball caused by bright klieg lights used in studios, and is a common illness in motion picture studios.

It was denied emphatically that the actor was in serious condition. Reid has been granted a three-weeks leave of absence and will spend the time in the mountains, it was said.

GOOD PROGRAM AT THE TYNDAL SCHOOL

The program and pie social held at the Tyndal school Friday night was well attended.

The program consisted of songs by the school and stereopticon views and a lecture by County Superintendent L. C. Shaw and Assistant Superintendent H. B. Piggman.

The proceeds of the social netted the school $29.

The teachers of Tyndal school are Mrs. Hardesty and Miss Kempf.

SOCIETY

Call Phone 205

Of especial interest to their many friends in this city is the marriage of Miss Phedora Elizabeth Timmons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Timmons, 309 south Fourth-st., to Harry D. Robson, of Cumberland, Md., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Robson, 504 Cambridge-st.

The marriage ceremony was read Thursday evening, October 19, in the First Presbyterian church at Cumberland. Mr. and Mrs. J. Siegel, (Nora Wright), were the only witnesses.

The bride is one of Coshocton's prettiest and most attractive young women. She is not only prominent in social circles, but a popular member in both the Woman's club and the Woman's M. usic club. Both young people have a host of friends who will be interested to learn of their marriage.

Mr. Robson is at present employed in the office of a Railroad Construction company, in Cumberland, where they are at home to their friends in 404 Park-st.

Mrs. John Redick, 712 Wilson-av., was given a farewell surprise party at her home, Friday evening, prior to moving to Fresno Route 1, where they will make their future home.

The affair was given by the members in the Royal Neighbors lodge. Delicious refreshments, provided by the self-invited guests were served to: Mrs. Redick, Mrs. Harry Denzer, Mrs. Harvey Wyland, Mrs. Nora Nelson, Mrs. Clary Bros., phone 516.

CANTWELL'S

Embroidery and Wool Crepe for Smartness

By MARY BROOKS PICKEN

TO COMBINE the charm of dignity with winsome youthfulness seems to be the object of this misses' street frock for which gray wool crepe is the fabric employed and Royal blue and green wool embroidery, the trimming, adopting, as it does, such an interesting arrangement on the front and back skirt panel effects, the applied pieces at the sides of the waist, and the flare cuffs.

The embroidery design is one that might be quickly and easily executed as it consists merely of darning stitches applied in vertical rows topped by a border in which this same stitch outlines circular motifs.

Knife plaits in the sides of the skirt provide fullness without detracting from the straight silhouette.

The collar might be of self material, but would be preferable of the lingerie variety which permits frequent freshening.

Unique quilt placement is manifested in the long pointed one that assumes a daring angle by being thrust through two slashes in the brim of this gray felt sports hat.

to grace the Town and Country club for the delightfully informal Carnival dance and party given for the members and their guests at the club.

An unusually splendid program of dance music was given by the Archie Collins Sextette, of Mt. Vernon.

Later in the evening a delicious buffet luncheon of cider, doughnuts, pumpkin pie and coffee was served.

A large crowd enjoyed the occasion, including the following out of town guests: Mrs. Allison, of Oklahoma, house guest of Mrs. W. T. Knight, Mrs. Cloyd Marshall, Jr., of New York City and Robert Haskins, of Dennison.

The following program will be given at the Loder school house, Friday evening, October 27.

CO. PROSECUTORS TO HANDLE FUEL PROFITEER CASES

Y. W. C. A. NEWS

Of course you all are aware of the Institute Conference which will be held in our association this week end, beginning Friday evening.

The opening meeting will take place in the Church of Christ, at 7:30 o'clock. Miss Mabel Head, National worker from New York City will be the principal speaker and we are eager that a large crowd hear her remarks. Following Miss Head's talk there will be an informal reception and light refreshments will be served by the social committee.

In addition to Miss Head, Miss Lois Ditch, of Chicago, Ill., whom so many of you know, will be with us. Don't forget that the Lancaster and Washington Courthouse associations will be our guests at this institute.

Then on Saturday, at the noon hour, there will be a luncheon in the Church of Christ.

Further announcements concerning the institute will be made later.

DISCOURAGES GIRLS SEEKING JOBS IN SOUTH AMERICA

Trying One's Luck Dangerous Says American Woman

Hiking jaunts to San Francisco are not the only way girls are expressing the wanderlust. South America is well to the fore just now in popularity among girls in all parts of the globe.

"Every week girls write me wanting to embark on South America to hunt a job," writes Mrs. Emma R. Chapin from Buenos Aires. "Let's pour in from all parts of the globe. We wrote one young woman upon her inquiry, that it would be impossible to get a position for her. A few weeks later she walked into our office. 'Didn't you get my letter advising you not to come?' our employment secretary asked. 'Oh, yes,' was the answer, 'but I thought I would just try my luck.'"

Her "luck" proved disappointing. Despite a musical education and the ability to speak five or six languages, she was forced to accept a resident teaching position with a family at thirty-five dollars monthly. The urge to see the world is so prevalent among girls that despite limited means young women are still sailing to seek work in southern countries. Many of them step off the gangway with no job and little cash.

"Please discourage any young woman coming who expects to earn her living here," advises Miss Chapin. "This applies to all professions and all kinds of work. There is no work for American or any foreign women at the present time in Argentina. This holds good for other South American countries as well."

Miss Chapin who sailed in 1919 to undertake Y. W. C. A. work in Buenos Aires is from Embleton, Pennsylvania.

An important meeting of the Y. W. C. A. committee is called for 7:30

CO. PROSECUTORS TO HANDLE FUEL PROFITEER CASES

Y. W. C. A. NEWS, Oct. 21—"When the fuel administration discovered profiteering, the name of the offender will be given to the prosecutor in the county where the offense occurs," declared State Fuel Administrator Neal here today.

"We will also hand over to the prosecutor any evidence we may have," added the administrator. "We will co-operate in every way possible in such prosecutions. When local authorities discover profiteering, responsibility for prosecution will be directly up to the county prosecutor. Under the fuel control law, the county prosecutors have full authority to act," declared Administrator Neal.

POWERFUL

Louis, New Orleans, and other large cities. The banks in these large cities would in turn pass the same policy on to the small banks in their districts. There were no contracts or stock control existing between the banks, but there was an invisible control which was very powerful. With the organization of the Federal Reserve Banks, the clearance of checks at par, and the legislation against interlocking directorates, this control was given a tremendous jolt. No longer is it much of an object for a country bank to keep a deposit with the large city bank. Thus there has been a gradual drifting away on the part of the country banks from the city banks. The large cities have become more independent of New York; and the country banks have become more independent of the large cities. As long as the money rates were high, this did not worry the city banks, but during the past year, when money rates have been declining, the large city banks have a distinctly felt the loss of their former power. Hence, they are looking around for some plan to get their country following back again.

"There is no hope of breaking up the Federal Reserve system which is functioning very satisfactorily. The men connected with the Federal Reserve banks are alive and ambitious. They are building permanent and substantial banking houses and are accumulating great resources. They are issuing reports and other publications which appeal greatly to the country banks. The larger city banks are distinctly worried about this and are looking for some other means for recouping their prestige. They first turned their attention to foreign trade organizations. 'Foreign trade' was the key note at the American Bankers' convention two years ago. The foreign trade business, however, has not panned out as well as the banks had hoped it would, and our recent tariff has given almost a death blow to what little new foreign trade we had. Thus, the banks' hopes in this regard are not very sanguine at the moment. Another attempt has shown itself in the organization of separate 'investment' companies and separate 'acceptance' companies. These have been organized by many of the larger banks and most of them are operating successfully. Banks are finding these investment companies more profitable at the moment than their foreign trade adventure.

The banks are gradually coming to the opinion, however, that they can recover their influence with the country districts only with organization of branch banks. Hence, there is a drive at present to have the national bank laws amended so that a city bank can own a system of branch banks in the surrounding cities and towns. Whether or not this is in line with Democracy, is a very debatable question; but the drive is on and my guess is that such branch banks are as inevitable as the chain store.

"All the banking systems of Europe are developed on the 'branch bank' idea. The big banks of England, France and Germany have their branches in hundreds of cities and towns. One of the finest branch systems in the world exists in Canada, just over the United States line. In Montreal there are several big banks, and each of these have from one hundred to three hundred branches in different Canadian cities and towns. As already stated, I doubt seriously whether the branch bank system is as good for the country as the present system. On the other hand, we know that the present tendency of eliminating the small farmer and substituting the renter in place of the owner is not for the good of the country. The development of chain store systems which are slowly crowding out the individual retailer is not good for the country.

"One Christmas Mr. Henry Ford sent me an autographed photograph on which he wrote these words: 'Eliminate absentee ownership and industrial problems will solve themselves.' He is correct in that absentee ownership is a present difficulty with our industrial organizations. As the chain store grows, a similar difficulty will develop which we do not now have with our individual retail system, and as a system of branch banks grows, there will be that same difficulty with our banking system. Yet I believe these changes are inevitable. Branch banks will be established throughout the country, and Congress will enact such legislation as is needed to make this possible."

"Mr. Babson was then asked what the effect of this would be on bank stocks and he replied that it should be a benefit to bank stocks. There are enough banks in the country districts at the present time. Hence, the city banks will be wise enough not to start new ones to serve as their branches. Instead the city banks will buy control of the better country banks. This will develop a new and active market for country bank stocks. Small banks in growing communities will be in special demand. Their stocks will surely sell higher. At the present time most bank stocks sell on 'book value' without any consideration of the value of 'good will'. As soon as city banks bid against one another for the country banks, the 'good will' feature will at once of value. With banks of small capital stock, this will at once become a valuable asset. Banks which have a small capital stock and banks which have a virtual monopoly of the banking interests in a community, will be in special demand. A community which has four banks will have these four banks purchased by four big city banks so that each of the four big city banks will have a branch in the smaller city. When, however, there is only one bank in the community the four big city banks will complete and bid against one another for the stock of this one bank. The stock of many of the small banks, which today can be bought around par, may later be purchased by some city bank at $200 to $250 a share. All the country banks need to do to bring about these conditions is to buy good securities, avoid risks, and to keep themselves in a strong position. The city banks will be willing to pay a good price for good will and will not especially care about immediate earning capacity; but they will want to be sure that the assets are sound and that the bank has not many lame ducks."

General business as reflected in the Babsonchart continues to improve. Its present position—but 3 per cent normal. The highest point in two years.

DAUGHERTY DEFENDS RY. INJUNCTION AND PROHIBITION RULING

CANTON, Oct. 21.—Litigation over the railroad injunction has not been dropped, nor will it be. Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty announced upon his arrival here this morning from Chicago. The attorney general is in Canton for his first and only political speech in the Ohio campaign. He is to address a Republican rally in the city auditorium tonight, when it is expected he will discuss "law and order" from the standpoint of the railway injunction. It will be the first extensive statement Daugherty has made since the filing of the injunction.

"Enforcement of the eighteenth amendment to the point of stopping ships carrying liquor from landing on American shores, and the railway injunction," were the only means of "curing the cold" with which certain Americans were afflicted, was the cabinet officer's terse remarks when he alighted from his train and was met by the local committee and newspapermen.

"What further I have to say on the subject will be said tonight," Daugherty was taken to the McKinley tomb where he placed a wreath and later was a guest at a luncheon given by Republican leaders of Northeastern Ohio. The afternoon was spent in conference with Republican leaders and his lieutenants from all over Ohio. Daugherty and Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upson are to be the speakers tonight with Congressman J. H. Humes, president. The Columbus Republican club is to sing.

GREAT PROCESSION MARKS OPENING OF STATE-MICH. GAME

OHIO STADIUM, Columbus, Oct. 21.—Official dedication of Ohio State University's mammoth $1,341,000 stadium started off promptly at 1 P. M. this afternoon. A procession, led by a color guard from the University Reserve Officers' training corps, filed into the big horseshoe, which was about two-thirds filled, with approximately 45,000 spectators.

Immediately following the color guard, another detachment of university cadets carried a big United States flag which was taken to a pole at the south end of the field and raised by Miss Eloise Fromme, Urbana, known as "The Stadium Girl."

While various school songs of the big ten universities were being played by the combined Michigan and Ohio State bands, pennants for all schools in the western conference were hoisted in flag poles about the upper tier of the horseshoe.

The procession included: President W. O. Thompson, Ohio State; President Menton, Michigan; Gov. Davis, of Ohio; faculty members and officials of both universities; state, county and city officials, and officials of various Ohio universities, colleges and high schools and "varsity O" members of Ohio State. Ohio State's pennant was the last to be raised. The Ohio song, "Fight that team across the field" played by the O. S. U. band was greeted with a tremendous ovation by the huge crowd. At 1:15 P. M. the stadium appeared to be filled. However, every avenue leading to the big horseshoe was thronged with assembling fans.

The combined bands, as one organization, marched to the south end of the field. President Thompson then made a brief talk.

At 1:20 Miss Fromme hoisted the flag. The bands joined in playing the star spangled banner, and the university cadets (O. R. T. C.) fired a twenty-one gun salute from their four inch field guns.

LONDON SURGEON HELD FOR BIGAMY

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Dr. John Seddon, prominent London surgeon, today was arrested in Philadelphia on a warrant from this city charging him with bigamy, according to word received here. With his arrest, an amazing story of the attempt of Dr. Seddon to recoup a fortune he lost thru playing the races by marrying two wealthy women, came to light.

Seddon is charged with having married Miss Frances Webb, of Atlantic City last July but when he learned she did not possess the finances he thought she did, he deserted her. On September 25, according to the charge, he married Mrs. Mary A. Hopper, of Philadelphia, a wealthy widow who is prominent in society after a whirlwind courtship. Mrs. Hopper has a palatial home at Langhorne, Penna.

Mrs. Hopper had planned to sail with Dr. Seddon on a honeymoon trip to Europe when his alleged duplicity was made known to her.

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

The Reason Madge Rushed to Open Katie's Door.

LILLIAN gave me no time for further introspection concerning Dr. Pettit's mysterious reference to Dicky's whereabouts. With her hand compellingly on my arm she rushed me down the hall and into her room, putting me into a chair near the light and turning its illumination full upon my face.

"Lucky dear mama-in-law has the children," she commented, as she turned my head and grimed face up to hers. "Sit still and close your eyes until I come back. I won't be five minutes. She loved her own room, and she was in her return laden with a basin of warm water, soap, an antiseptic lotion, a healing unguent and plenty of soft cloths."

"Now," she said, tucking a big bath towel around my neck, "we'll have you looking like the cricket's chirp in no time. But I warn you, some of this will smart."

Her warning was justified. Some of her remedies did smart almost insupportably, but though I am an ardent coward where physical pain is concerned, I set my teeth, determined not to wince, when only a few feet from my door. Tom Chester had undergone—indeed, was undergoing still—agonies which made my hurts seem the merest annoyances.

But it was over at last, and with my face feeling comfortable, and my nervous tension relaxed, I opened my eyes. Lillian gave me permission, and smiled at her.

"I feel like a new woman," I said gratefully.

Lillian tipped her head to one side, looking at me critically.

Plans in Detail.

"You look like one, that is, like the militant variety used to look after having been dragged from a heckling stunt," she remarked dryly. "No," as I rose involuntarily, you can't have any mirror. Your face will be healed over in a few days, and there's no use upsetting your vanity before then. I've something more important on hand. Tell me everything that happened since you left the house. Of course, I know you did the job, somehow, but I'd like the details."

The note of pride, of absolute confidence in her own work, was so gratifying that when I had finished recounting the incidents of my expedition, including Tom Chester's disablement, and my own wild ride upon the back of Smith's limousine, the loving, impetuous clasp of her arms, and her lavish commendation so rarely bestowed, thrilled me greatly and made me flush deeply.

"You brave, resourceful, idiotic girl," she exclaimed, with her arms close around me. "How easily you might have been killed! But how wonderful to think you turned the trick! That link in the chain is finished now. Sooner or later Smith will lead the way to the man, as wanted, the wealthy, trusted, seemingly 100 per cent. American, who is the spider in the centre of this monstrous web of treachery and infamy. And if my lunch is good, Katherine is going straight to a house, which if not the home of the man we want, is that of some one very near to him."

"Turn Up the Light—"

"I wish she weren't going," I said impetuously. "I feel as though—"

"You feel as though you needed a good night's sleep to get the tremor out of you," Lillian retorted. "Of course you are imagining everything in the calendar that could happen to Katherine just now, and I don't wonder after your experience this evening. Katherine won't be in any danger—that is," she amended conscientiously—"the chances are at least ten to one of her coming through safely, and tonight you had less than a fifty-fifty. No, events are moving very smoothly. We can afford to rest on our oars a bit. Listen! Isn't that some one crying?"

I listened for a second or two, then rose abruptly.

"It's Katie," I decided. "I was afraid she'd be frightened when she awakened. Hurry, or she'll rouse everybody in the house."

I was in the hall before I had finished speaking, and racing down the corridor to the kitchen wing. Katie's cries—mere wimpers at first—were becoming louder, and I knew my volatile little maid's tendency to hysteria when frightened, or angry. Lillian's footsteps sounded behind me, and she had caught up to me by the time I had managed to open Katie's door.

My little maid was sitting up in bed, her hands clutching at her still swollen throat upon which Smith's brutal, murderous hands had closed, her eyes wildly darting around the dimly-lighted room, her lips uttering hoarse cries, which were increasing in volume with every second. I sprang to the side of the bed, throwing a crisp command over my shoulder to Lillian:

"Turn up the light—high!"

OUTNUMBERED :: By Juanita Hamel

YOUR HEALTH

Why Every Girl Should Play All Good Outdoor Games

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D., Commissioner of Health, New York City

THERE is a popular idea that games for girls must differ from games for boys. Because of her more delicate construction it is alleged that the girl must be warned against active, especially violent, exercise.

Personally, I have not followed this school of thought. It has seemed to me Nature must have anticipated all the strenuous activities of a healthy girl, and planned her body accordingly.

When you see the thousands of women tilling the fields and harvesting the grain in Europe, and then observe their good health, you realize that the race has not degenerated because of this necessity.

I saw no more women in the European fields last summer than I saw thirty years ago. In other words, this practice is not the result of the war, it may be said to be the result of the war, because for generations the young men have served in the armies, as in the fishing villages the men are forced into the fields, the women are forced into the fields.

In spite of hard work of the part of the girls and women the race has not suffered. Healthy babies, hardy youths and long-lived adults have sprung from these conditions.

It is gratifying to have this view regarding female activity confirmed by a group of distinguished specialists.

In October, 1922, I was appointed in England a committee with representatives from the Royal College of Physicians, the Royal College of Surgeons, the British Medical Association, the Medical Women's Federation, the British Association for Physical Training, the National Union of Women Teachers, the Private Schools Association, the College of Preceptors and other similar institutions.

You see, this is a very representative group, and the conclusions reached are most interesting. Space does not permit a full report, but here are some of the accepted views:

Suitable physical education, including games and sports, is as generally beneficial to girls as to boys.

It is agreed, however, that there is need for individual discrimination. Certain girls may not be suited for particular forms of exercise, and on this account examination as to fitness is desirable.

The usual games played by girls are approved. Football, which is rarely attempted by American girls certainly, is disapproved. Swimming, rowing, cycling and horseback riding are good for girls, provided they are not overdone. It is particularly important that swimming be supervised, because it may on tall strain on the heart. Racing in rowing was frowned upon, because of heart strain.

Undue strain and fatigue should be avoided. The report emphasized the importance of maintaining a proper balance between mental exertion and physical fatigue. A girl working hard preparing for examinations in school should not be overtaxed by strenuous sports. On the whole, a girl may do practically anything a boy does.

In commenting on this report one London paper said:

Good Night Stories

By Blanche Silver

LINDA MEETS A DEAR LITTLE SAILOR.

WELL, of all things!" exclaimed Linda, as the little bug whirled through the air above her head several times, then dropped with a plunk into the water in front of her. "Poor thing! He must have grown dizzy and fallen into the lake."

"Phoo! Don't you believe any such thing!" croaked a hoarse voice, and Linda laughed as she saw Croaker Green Frog swelling out his cheeks with an air of disgust. "Don't you believe it. Dizzy Beetle will never drown, let me tell you. But something's going to happen one of these days if I get a chance at him. Why, when he drops out of a clear sky like that I nearly jump out of my boots. It's dreadful to frighten folks the way he does."

"Oh, Croaker Green Frog, I'm sorry I startled you," laughed Mr. Dizzy Beetle. "But that's the only way I can get back into the water—by dropping."

"Pshaw, don't you believe it, Linda," Croaker Green Frog laughed. "Dizzy Beetle could dive down much easier if he really and truly wanted to. Why, Linda, Dizzy Beetle can swim, dive and fly through the air better than any fellow I know of in this lake."

"Well," laughed Dizzy Beetle, "while you're shouting my good points, don't forget to add I can hold my breath for an hour at least; if I care to. Yes, sir-ee, I can remain without breathing for a whole hour if I really want to."

"Believe me, that's something to be proud of, I'll say," laughed Linda. "There are not many who can boast of that. You must be a very wonderful little creature."

"That's what I've heard folks say," buzzed Dizzy Beetle. "Not many meadow folk can fly and swim any better than I do. But I suppose if my hind-legs weren't fashioned the way they are I couldn't swim so well. They are what you might call oar-like. Anyway, they are certainly a great help in swimming. Then, too, I catch hold of things with my front legs and carry them home, using my hind-legs to swim with. Not many water creatures can do that."

"No, I would have to admit," said Croaker Green Frog, "that Dizzy Beetle is one of the most interesting of all the beetle tribe—a master of the air-waves as well as the water-waves."

"There's only one thing I would change if I could," laughed Dizzy Beetle. "I wish I liked to fly in broad daylight. I don't like to, and it's very seldom you see me out of the water except early in the evening or after the moon is high. Then we water beetles have the time of our lives."

"Why, the other night we had a wonderful party. We went over to call on our cousins who live in the lake beyond here. Say, we had some time! I'd tell you about it, only I must be off."

And without another word, Dizzy Beetle dived under the water, and Linda didn't see him again. She stayed and chatted with Croaker Green Frog until his wife called him, then Linda ran into the house and tumbled into her bed.

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT Miss Busybody's Business

Copyright, 1922, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

DEAR WINIFRED BLACK: "The Foolish and Bored," and somehow I can't resist telling you what happened to me.

I am 25, very happily married, have the dearest three-room apartment, with large rooms with plenty of sunshine streaming in all day long. Why, my bathroom is as large as the bedrooms in some apartments! It's all white tile with a large window opening right on the outside—no air shafts.

My husband can't do enough for me. He cleans the bathroom and kitchen floors for me. Keeps the other floors spotless. The dishes and does everything to make life easy for me.

I have always had a good position, and when I married I felt that I ought to keep it and try and help the bank account grow. Besides, I really like to go out every morning. At night after a day in an office I just love to go home. On account of his helping me, going to business and keeping house is not hard at all.

Whose Business but Yours?

Well, to get on with my story, a distant relative who means nothing to me wrote and asked if she might come and see me. I answered that she might. Well, she came. She had to say my home was lovely. She couldn't say otherwise, but she made a couple of nasty remarks about my marriage, who couldn't support their wives. This made me furious. My husband makes $15 a week and I make $20, and as you know there are lots of people with less than that. I was a fool to go to work, and then I spoke my little piece and told her in a nice way that it was none of her business.

This particular woman has a husband who is a cripple. He has not worked in years and she has steadily refused to go to work to help. They live on their wife's bluffing their way through wherever they can. She pays the highest rent she can possibly afford, and in order to get in a good neighborhood she always lives on the top floor, and that crippled husband has to climb up and down four flights of stairs every time he goes out.

Don't you think I did right in (to use a slang expression) not letting her get away with it? Why should she hurt my feelings as much as she likes and expect me to consider her? I didn't ask her to come back and see me because I don't want her. Why is it that some people are always trying to make others discontented?

ONE OF YOUR READERS.

DID you do right, little Mrs. Spiffert? Well, yes, I think you did.

The only way to stop meddling people from trying to meddle in your affairs is to give them a dose of their own medicine—and be done with it.

You didn't invite this person to visit you anyway, and, even if you had invited her, your invitation did not carry with it any right to criticism.

Of course your visitor was entitled to her own opinion about you and your husband, and your home and the way you live. But, equally of course, she hadn't the slightest right to say one word to you about it.

You don't approve of the way she lives, but you didn't think it your affair to tell her so—that's where you showed not only your good sense but your good breeding.

So you work, instead of staying at home and doing all the house-keeping yourself, do you?

The Ideal and the Real

Whose business is that but your husband's and yours?

Nobody pays much attention to the old-fashioned idea that it is better for a woman to half starve at home and keep her husband's nose to the grindstone all his life than it is for her to help out and make some money and put some of it away so that in their middle life the couple will have something real and substantial.

Thousands of girls who couldn't marry at all unless they went on working for a year or so, do marry and they make good wives and happy ones, too.

Of course, the ideal marriage is one where the wife can stay at home and take care of the children.

But if you haven't children and want to work, who has any right to say one word to you about it or even to lift an eyebrow as you pass? Your life and your husband's life belong to you and to him and to nobody else on earth.

I'm glad you gave Mrs. Busybody a piece of your mind. I hope it will do her good.

Diary of a Fashion Model

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

She Describes a Sleeveless Evening Gown of Simple Design.

It would be difficult to tell from the cut of this gown whether it was meant for afternoon or evening wear," commented Veronica when the wardrobe mistress was helping her into one of the newest frocks.

"Which would you guess?" asked the mistress of wardrobe.

"I know it's for evening because of the green-lined panel," I observed with a superior air.

"Well, if the truth be known, it's something very hard to tell," Veronica commented.

"It is, indeed," I agreed.

"Last summer, on the Avenue, I used to see women in sleeveless dresses whom I wished I could send home and ask to find some more clothes," said the mistress of wardrobe. "Even if I do see so Veronica smiled and strutted about in the beautiful black velvet that had just been fastened.

"This sleeveless mode might be cool for street wear just now, but it would have been very snappy in crepe for fall," she insisted.

"I must admit I like an excuse for a sleeve, at least," I said.

"The lines of this are ravishing. I think," said Veronica, as she whirled about so the panel floated at the side.

"The green chiffon that lines your panel is a delicious shade," I said.

"Yes, it's that seafoam green Madame loves so," Veronica answered.

"It reminds me of cool lettuce salad," I ventured.

"Why not cool water or green valera or something more picturesque?" Veronica suggested.

"Very well, have it your way, but do turn so I can see the ornament on your frock."

She came closer so I could see the gold-thread ornament that dangled over her left hip. Its two discs held the draperies in place, while from them dropped gold cords with a tassel on the end of each.

"It is very stunning!" I exclaimed.

"And how do you like my gold and black brocade slippers?" she asked, sticking a shapely foot out so I could examine the slippers she wore.

I approved of them thoroughly, and also of the pale gold stockings that matched them.

"Madame's evening things are so lovely," exclaimed the wardrobe mistress. "I don't see how she can keep on designing things with each one lovelier than the last."

"She excels at elegantly simple things, and this season she's exactly in her element," commented Veronica.

"Oh, these lovely, dainty frocks are so superior to fussy ones. I don't believe women will ever go back to ornate things," I remarked.

"Well, I must go out now and see whether Madame's new client is ready to pay dearly for this elegant simplicity," Veronica remarked as she left.

HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

SUNDAY OCT. 2

Sunday's astrological chart is of happy augury, holding but a single admonition—to guard against deception or fraud, especially in the way of signing papers or agreements. Those in the employment of others should benefit.

Those whose birthday it is may look for an enterprising and successful year, but should guard against fraud. A child born on this day will be skillful, enterprising, generous and popular.

Monday's horoscope is confusing, with the forecast of active business conditions, but with the financial outlook doubtful. Changes may be hazardous and accident should be avoided.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year of some growth and recognition in business, but they should make changes cautiously and avoid accident. A child born on this day will be clever, industrious, popular and successful.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I love a young man about three years older than myself. He seems to like me, but he never asks me to go out with him. I go about with other young people, and have plenty of admirers, but I can love only this one man.

Please advise me what to do, because I cannot live without his love.

DESPERATE SUNBEAM.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: Ask the young man to call on you. This is all you can do, my dear, to put that poor friendship with him. Perhaps he cannot afford to invite you to go places with him.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am 22 years of age, and have been married a little over a year. At times I am very happy with my husband, but at other times my heart goes so much and I get very restless.

He is good to me, but I am not sure that he loves me. For a few times he has told me that he does not love me.

TEXAS BOSS.

for me. I work hard trying to make him happy and contented, but he keeps depending on me. He is in a way very fond of a few girls I know, and that makes me rather suspicious. Please advise me what you think can be done.

SHORTY.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: Try to be as sweet and attractive to your husband and make your home as pleasant for him that he will not want to go out with other girls in the evening.

Above all, do not show your suspicion, and by holding what may be unproved thoughts of him you may spoil the happiness you now have.

ANNE LAURIE will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of the paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her in care of this office.

dry work, needlework, infant welfare and hygiene. Instruction is also given in singing and piano-playing as a refining influence and all-around benefit. Of course, there is no way of forcing maid to attend, yet those of the better grade see the value of this course and take advantage of the training.

Household help is an uncertain matter, for if they are to be trained at all, the pleasure of instructing them is entirely ours. The difficulty in this method of training is the lack of standardization. The training that will be sufficient for one household is useless in another. The fact is, our own housewives, taken together and arranged to train household help in a certain manner, work and wages may be standardized. This means co-operation, such as the war brought about among women, but it can be managed in the smartest manner. It is just the work that women's clubs can and should do.

The all-around housewife who knows her business has no trouble in keeping help, and training them so that when they seek other homes they are efficient if allowed to do the work in the way they have been taught. But the inexperienced new mistress begins before Mary gets her hat off. "Mary, we keep the frying-pan on the left side of the range, this article here and that over there." All this the girl has seen at a glance, and she changes utensils to more convenient places, and her mistress happens to notice it, the battle is on before there is time to get the girl's point of view. She is rarely given a chance to show what she knows, and the mistress is often arbitrary without having the least idea how things should be arranged to facilitate doing the work. So training is needed by the mistress, after all. She should know "almost everything," and be also gifted enough to teach what she knows to others.

Every good housewife has or should have a system, one that she has evolved from her own training and the consideration of the best help follow her method.

It is not absolutely necessary for a woman to be a good cook herself to train a cook, but she must know enough about the art to accurately judge needs, to require, time needed to do the work, and in a general way the buying of materials, in order to direct the work. It is likewise not obligatory that she should know how to sew and mend, but she should be acquainted enough of the work to be able to speak with authority, and give orders intelligently.

Housekeeping is a profession, and if we do not teach our daughters to manage an efficient home can they manage a household? Training along this line means self-development, and is part of the years we should leave our daughters to learn.

Is Calling to You in the Sixth Annual Roll Call.

Today, October 22, the enrollment of Coshocton county's legions will begin.

To acquire or maintain membership should be a privilege none should deny themselves.

The cost is only one dollar.

There will be no drive for funds other than for annual one dollar memberships, but families are urged whenever possible to enroll both parents and children.

The work of the Red Cross in Coshocton county has been told over and over again in the columns of The Tribune; it is too well known to need repeating here.

The Red Cross is chartered by Congress; it is the official intermediary between the ex-service man and the different Government agencies with which he has to deal in connection with his various needs, rights or privileges as a defender of our Flag and of our homes.

The Red Cross constitutes the reserve forces of our citizenship held in readiness to respond instantly to human distress wherever such may appear from fire, flood, epidemic or disaster of any kind.

Remember the ringing motto of this Sixth Annual Roll Call—Every American Everywhere a Member of the Red Cross—and be ready for the solicitor when she comes. Have your dollar ready to exchange for a Red Cross button and certificate.

HARVARD OUTPLAYED, BUT IS 24-TO-10 VICTOR; CENTRE A VICTIM OF CRIMSON'S LUCK

STADIUM, CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 21.—Centre college came up from the foothills of Kentucky to suffer a tragic defeat at the hands of Harvard in what will probably be the last inter-sectional meeting of the two colleges in the Harvard stadium. The final score was 24 to 10 but it by no means tells of the playing strength of the two teams. The game was played to a capacity crowd of 50,000 persons, filling every inch of the great concrete structure. Centre outplayed Harvard, rush for rush, but it could not outluck her. Fumbles of the most costly kind presented the Crimson with two of its three touchdowns and placed her in a position to kick a field goal late in the first half.

HARVARD STADIUM, CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 21.—This great concrete bowl known as the Harvard Stadium, was a boiling, seething mass of colorful humanity when Harvard and Centre college came out on the gridiron for the third and what probably will be their ultimate meeting, this golden afternoon. It was the deciding game of the series between the ruddy little ferrier from the far-off Kentucky hills and the great beast of the north and in the 50,000 gathering, blotting out the wide of the stands, as the monkey ink bottle had been spilled there were many thousands who confirmed their allegiance as much by their casual southern drawl as by their gold and white armbands and pennants. It was one of the greatest crowds to which the cold, indifferent walls of the stadium have played host to since its erection.

Centre has been embarrassed by the illness of Bartlett, a veteran back, necessitating a shift in the line. Thomas has been slipped back in the backfield at full back. Gordy went from left end to left tackle and Lynch from left tackle to the side lines.

By 2 o'clock there was scarcely a vacant space in the entire stadium, yet the thousands continued to troop across the Larse Anderson bridge like columns of an advancing army. At every gate they were met by signs proclaiming the fact that no tickets were for sale. Harvard came on the field at 2:10 for a brief workout and then returned to its dressing room, but Centre kept itself from view until ten minutes before game time.

Harvard's reception was formal. It itself, Centre's an ovation. The underdog is a popular animal in these parts.

PLAY BY PLAY

FIRST QUARTER — Captain Roberts of Centre won the toss and elected to receive the kickoff, defending the north goal. Gehrke kicked off for Harvard over the goal line to Covington, who touched the ball for a touch back. Hudgins made 3 yards off left tackle and then on a double pass, Centre lost 15 yards and the ball when Snowday fumbled. It was recovered by Fitts of Harvard. Owen went thru right tackle for a touchdown. Buell droppedkick a goal. Score, Harvard 7, Centre 0. Roberts kicked off to Buell on the twenty yard line and the quarterback rushed back twenty yards. Owen fumbled and Shadoan recovered the ball on Harvard's 41 yard line. Covington made a yard around left end. Roberts shot off right tackle for five yards. Covington went outside left tackle for five yards and a first down on Harvard's 31 yard line. Covington made two yards at left tackle. Covington's forward pass was intercepted by Gehrke on Harvard's 21 yard line. Owen made five yards thru center. Buell added five yards and a first down at left end. Gehrke on a delayed pass, went outside left tackle for six yards. Buell added 3 at right tackle. Gehrke punted 65 yards over the goal line. It was Centre's ball on its own 20 yard line. Covington went around right end for six yards. Hartley was injured on the play but resumed.

Roberts made five yards and a first down thru Centre on a spread formation. Roberts was downed in his tracks by Fitts, as he tried to slide by the short side of the line.

Covington was thrown for a loss of 3 yards, by Dunker and Grews. Covington punted to Buell on Harvard's 40 yard line and he slipped down the sidelines to Centre's 46 yard line before being tackled. Owen made 9 yards off left guard. On a delayed pass Gehrke went out side left tackle, for 12 yards and first down on Centre's 27 yard line.

Owen went outside left tackle for five yards. Gehrke made four at the same spot. Owen went thru right side of the line for ten and first down on Centre's ten yard line. Chapin slipped off left tackle for 3.

Owen made 4 at right tackle. Chapin went thru center to the one yard line. Gehrke went thru center for a touchdown. Score, Harvard 13, Centre 0.

Buell kicked goal from touchdown. Score, Harvard 14; Centre 0.

Rubhart replaced Lynch at left tackle for Centre. Gehrke kicked off to Covington on the 10 yard line and he came back 17 yards before he was tackled. Covington went thru right tackle for 3 yards but fumbled directly into Owen's arms on Centre's 34 yard line. Coburn here replaced Owen in Harvard's line-up.

Coburn made one yard on left side. Buell shot a forward pass to Chapin who ran 24 yards for a touchdown. Buell kicked goal. Score, Harvard 21; Centre 0.

Roberts kicked off over the goal line. Harvard's ball on the twenty yard line. Low in for Buell in Harvard line-up. Chapin made right yard off right tackle, but Centre was offside and was penalized five yards.

On a delayed pass Gehrke gained three yards at left tackle. Gehrke punted to Covington on Centre's 40 yard line. He made only two yards before he was smothered by Harvard defenders.

A lock-step shift again was put on and this time Covington turned left end for five yards. End of period.

Score, Harvard 21; Centre 0.

2-Tier Skirt and Full Sleeve in Canton Crepe

By MARY BROOKS PICKEN

ON EVERY hand 'tis heard, "The silhouette is so entirely new." And 'tis true. The full sleeve, the long skirt, and the simplicity of the waist-line, all have their part in making the silhouette seem entirely different. "Every dress must be remade," 'tis also said. True, but never were two materials in combination so much in vogue; never before did we have novelty materials so just right for the new silhouettes; never before was it possible to conceal entirely a "make-over" as at this time.

The original of this dress was of navy Canton crepe with gray embroidery of contrasting color, but it is a design adaptable to cloth or velvet and especially attractive for the latter, carrying as it does just the right simplicity.

knifed off left tackle for five yards. The third time the play was tried and Covington shot outside left tackle for seven yards and first down on Harvard's 47 yard line. Covington added six yards on the same play. Roberts on the shift went thru right tackle for twelve yards. Covington went outside right tackle behind the shift for 13 yards. The stands were in an uproar. Roberts made two yards at center, the shift being used again. For Harvard Kernan went in for Clark. Covington tried the shift again at right end but gained only 2 yards when he slipped with an open field in front of him.

Another shift and Covington went outside right tackle for ten yards and a first down on Harvard's 10 yard line. Hubbard went out and Kunhardt replaced him. Roberts made 3 yards at left tackle. The shift was used again on this play. Again the shift and this time Covington made a yard at center. Roberts added another yard at left tackle, the pass being high. Covington kicked a field goal from the 15 yard line. Gehrke kicked off to Snowday on Centre's 8 yard line. Center returned the ball 13 yards.

They started the lock shift all over again and after shifting back and forth four times Hudkins made 2 yards at right tackle. Chapin and Lee were out in the last play and time was taken out.

Kernan was injured and was replaced by Bradford. Churchill went in for Chapin who also was injured. Greenough went in for Dunker. Covington failed to gain an inch at left end.

Centre was caught holding on the play and was penalized 15 yards. Covington made six yards around left tackle. Covington's pass was intercepted by Gehrke and he rushed back ten yards before being forced out of bounds. Gehrke made a yard at center. Kubal was injured on the last play. He recovered however and gamely resumed play. Churchill shot thru the left side of center for 8 yards.

Coburn added two yards at right tackle. Gehrke made a first down at center on Centre's 14 yard line. Churchill made a bare yard at right tackle. Churchill was thrown for the loss of two yards by Hudgins as he attempted to turn left end. Gehrke was forced out of bounds without gaining an inch. Leech is out and replaced by Pfaffman for Harvard. Pfaffman immediately signaled his appearance by kicking a field goal from the 24 yard line. Score, Harvard 24; Centre 3. Roberts kicked off over the goal line to Churchill who came back 27 yards. Churchill made two yards at left tackle. Gehrke punted to Covington on Centre's 50 yard line.

Eastman recovered the ball for Harvard and rushed back to Centre's 12 yard line before he was forced out of bounds by Gregor. Rouellard replaces Coburn in Harvard line-up. Churchill made two yards at left tackle. Gehrke added 3 yards outside right tackle. Fitts was offside and Harvard was penalized five yards. Pfaffman went out and was replaced by Akers for Harvard. Akers' pass was intercepted by Snowday on Centre's fourth yard line. On the first line-up Roberts slipped away out, to receive Covington's pass and gained nine yards. He had the field before him but stumbled and was nailed by Rouellard.

Score, Second Period: Harvard 24; Centre 3. End Half: Harvard 24; Centre 3.

THIRD QUARTER—In Harvard team Hubbard back in place Kunhardt and Buell in place of Akers. Chapin also replaced Churchill. Gehrke kicked off to Hudgins, on the five yard line. The Centre back rushed all the way to the 28 yard line. Covington was smeared as he attempted to turn the end behind the lock step shift. Covington hit outside right tackle for four yards, carrying the ball to the 3 yard line. Covington added 2 more at the same spot. On this play he gained a first down, the ball being half a yard from Harvard's goal. Here the period ended.

Score, Harvard 24; Centre 3.

FOURTH PERIOD — Covington hit the left side of the Harvard line but gained less than a foot. Covington tried the right side of the end and this time failed to gain at all. Covington was stopped a foot from the goal on a sally around left end.

On the fourth and last try, however, Covington dashed around right end for a touchdown behind the splendid interference of Roberts. Gehrke kicked goal.

Roberts kicked off to Gehrke on the goal line. He came back 24 yards straight up the center of the field. Gehrke went outside left tackle for six yards.

Rouellard made two yards at left tackle. Gehrke punted to Covington on Centre's 20 yard line. He was dropped by a swarm of five yards. Covington went outside right tackle for six yards. Covington threw a forward pass to Lemon for a gain of 24 yards, carrying the ball to Harvard's 46 yard line. Covington advanced one yard thru right tackle. Covington threw another forward pass to Lemon out of bounds for an 11 yard gain, giving Centre first down on Harvard's 34 yard line. Holder replaced McGillin for Harvard. Covington failed to gain at center. Covington's pass to Lemon was knocked down by Rouellard. On a spread formation Covington got around right end for five yards. Another spread formation, Covington failed a field goal and then passed over the line to Roberts, who failed to hold the ball.

Harvard's 33 yard line, where he was dropped in his tracks by Hudgins. Fitts gained a yard at left end. Gehrke went thru center for 3 yards. Gehrke punted to Covington on Centre's 23 yard line and admits the wildest demonstration of the game rushed back thru the Harvard team 45 yards to Harvard's 35 yard line. He was almost clear when tackled from behind by Greenough.

Covington slid by right end for four yards. Covington went outside right tackle for four yards and first down on Harvard's 23 yard line. Covington hit right tackle for 3 yards. Red Roberts added 3 more at left tackle. Covington dashed thru right tackle for five yards and first down on Harvard's 11 yard line. Covington hit the same spot for two yards. Marshal Threatens To Lock Fighters Together In Barn

Marshal John A. Stevens has a method all his own for quickly quelling fights and fighters. Witness a nembryonic fight, only in the quarrel stage when the marshal shows up.

"Here, you," he shouts angrily. "One more word from either of you and I'll take you around to a barn I've got and lock you up. Then, you can fight it out and I'll arrest the man that is licked." Thus far, this has been a sure cure for the pestilence and the fight dies in its infancy.

"But, what if they'd call your bluff, some time?" he was asked. "In that case," declared the marshal, "I'd have to do as I say."

CANDIDATES ATTEND NON-PARTISAN MEET

The Friday night meeting of the Non-partisan League of Women Voters was attended by candidates for political office, in larger numbers than most people expected. The meeting was held in Agricultural hall and practically every candidate who was not otherwise engaged responded to the invitation to speak.

R. Bruce Putnam, Republican candidate for re-election as prosecuting attorney, spoke briefly on his record. John A. Stevens, Democrat for sheriff, talked on the principles of his party and declared he was a staunch Democrat. Clark, Republican for sheriff, was unable to be present, but sent a letter which was read by Rev. Pickel. It dealt with enforcement of the prohibition laws, in which he stated the administration has been notoriously lax. B. T. Snyder, Republican candidate for representative to the state legislature, endorsed the proposed school levy.

Robert Damon and Mrs. L. A. Shaffer, candidates for clerk of courts were next. Mrs. Shaffer spoke on the deplorable lack of interest in politics shown by women over the county, while Mr. Damon chivalrously declined to speak because his opponent was a woman.

W. F. Garver, Democrat for state senator, appeared soon after the meeting had adjourned with a nicely prepared speech, but was dismissed by a wave of the hand from Mrs. Ed Patrick, chairman, and the statement that, "when you have a date with the women, you have to keep it on time." She related enough however, to give him another opportunity at a later meeting.

Rev. Pickel and Rev. Kennedy spoke the effects of bad government. Another meeting will be held next Friday at Katherine Kennedy, of Columbus, can be procured to speak. The league is planning to distribute sample ballots and instruct women in voting. It is also planned to have women at the polls in large enough numbers to dispel the staid atmosphere which according to Mrs. Patrick, frightens many women away.

Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Schull, of Florida were recent guests of Mrs. Catherine Burris, East Canal-st. Mrs. R. E. Mills and son are visiting relatives in Pittsburgh, Pa. this week.

Ralph Brumbaugh has returned home from a business trip to Akron. Messrs Charles Starker and Harry Tyler attended the Masonic grand lodge at Columbus this week. J. K. Anderson after visiting his sons here for the past several weeks, has returned to his daughter's home at Beverly, O.

Mr. and Mrs. Burris Moore, of Uhrichsville spent Sunday with his mother, Mrs. Maria Moore, Newcomerstown.

Mrs. Lattie Voorbes, of Neoga, Ill. is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Lucy Miskimen, State-st.

Mrs. Harry Latham and children of Newark are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Wilson, East Canal-st.

MICHIGAN

preparing the huge stadium for this afternoon's festivities were completed this morning by athletic officials and helpers. The stadium was profusely decorated with flags, bunting and the colors of the two universities. Extra rows of benches and chairs were grouped around the playing field to accommodate many hundreds of spectators.

Friendly rivalry was elevated to the N-th power at the new Ohio Stadium here this afternoon when, a full half hour before the Ohio State and Michigan football teams began their momentous gridiron contest, the University of Michigan and the Ohio State University bands aroused the more than 70,000 spectators to high stages of exhilaration by marching around the field playing their respective school songs.

Michigan players came onto the field at 1:30. They received a rousing ovation. While the visiting players ran the length of the field in signal drill, punted and threw forward passes, they were encouraged by lusty yells issuing from the "M" block. At 1:39 the Ohio State team ran onto the field amidst the greatest ovation ever accorded an O. S. U. team.

The appearance of the Michigan team gave the fans their first idea of Michigan's real strength. In their practice, the visiting players clearly demonstrated that the Ohio State players will have to fight hard to win and that their strength as forecasted has not been underestimated.

Kipke, star Michigan punter, repeatedly dropped place kicks between the goal posts from the 35 yard line.

At 1:43 the Michigan team left the field to receive final instructions from Coach Yost.

At 1:47 the Ohio State team returned to their club room for final advice from coach Wilce.

At 1:50 the stadium was filled to capacity and fully 1,000 persons stood outside the open end of the big horseshoe where they will be able to catch an occasional glimpse of the teams in action.

Stragglers were observed wandering their way to the stadium when the teams returned to the gridiron. Officials of this afternoon's game are: Referee—H. B. Hackett, West Point; Umpire—J. J. Schommer, Chicago; Field Judge—H. G. Hedges, Dartmouth; Head Linesman—E. E. Prugh, Ohio Wesleyan.

Michigan team returned to the field at 1:55 while the "M" block madly waved their colors and yelled. The Michigan band also played a stirring Michigan song. The Wolf whines marked the length of the field in signal drill.

At 1:55 the crowd outside the fence at the south end of the stadium broke thru one section and rushed onto the field. Mounted policemen vainly tried to drive them back and then confined their efforts to holding the rest of the crowd back.

At 1:59 the Ohio State players returned to the gridiron while the numerous thousands of admiring fans wildly cheered.

The game started at 2:01 P. M. Ohio State won the toss. Captain Pixley chose to defend the north goal.

Ohio is playing against the wind.

Pixley kicked off to Michigan's 20 yard line, Roby returning the ball 7 yards.

Isabel, Ohio State, and Cappon, Michigan, were hurt in the play. Cappon made five yards on a fake punt thru center. Cappon repeated for two yards Cappon again carried the ball for 2 1/2 yards. Cappon repeated for three. Kipke went around right end for 8 yards.

Uteritz gained 2 thru center. Roby passed but it was incomplete. Kipke lost 2 yards around left end.

Cappon made six yards thru right tackle. Kipke kicked behind Ohio's goal line. The kick was good for 60 yards. It is Ohio's ball on their own 20 yard line. Workman went thru center for two yards, but the ball was called back and Michigan penalized five yards for offside. Workman made 3 yards thru center. Blair went thru left tackle for five yards. Blair fumbled and Ohio was penalized five yards for offside.

Workman's punt was blocked. Roby recovering on the 40 yard line and gaining two yards. It is Michigan's ball on Ohio's 37 yard line. Cappon failed to gain. Goebel passed the ball to a Michigan player who touched it but it fell into the arms of Uteritz who carried it to Ohio's 22-yard line, but the ball was called back to its original position. Kipke made 13 yards thru right tackle. It is Michigan's ball on Ohio's 25 yard line.

Uteritz gained 3 yards thru center.

Kipke punted behind Ohio's goal line.

It is Ohio's ball on the 29 yard line.

Blair gained two yards thru center.

Michigan was penalized five yards for offside.
